U.S. Threatens More N. Vietnam Bombing

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. Command today announced the loss of five aircraft in South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, and an increase in small-unit fighting in South Vietnam. The toll was 22 Americans killed, 22 wounded and one missing, the Command said.

U.S. military officials also warned there may be more American air strikes against surface-to-air missile—SAM—sites inside North Vietnam to protect B52 bombers flying raids against the Ho Chi Minh trail just inside Laos. The warning came after attacks Sunday and Monday on SAM sites.

Farther south along the trail through the Laotian panhandle, there were indications that the 11,800 South Vietnanese troops trying to cut the network on the ground were bogging down due to stiffening enemy resistance, heavy antiaircraft fire and poor weather limiting U.S. air support.

Advanced Column

South Vietnamese headquarters in Saigon said the most advanced column of troops had pushed about 14 miles westward into Laos at last report Monday after eight days. But Lt. Gen. Hoang Xuan Lam, commander of the operation, said some reconnaissance troops were at Sephone, a key North Vietnamese transshipment point 25 miles west of the border.

The U.S. aircraft losses announced today included:

—A big CH47 Chinook helicopter and an F4 Phantom fighter-bomber in the Laotian panhandle. The helicopter was shot down with five crewmen killed and a sixth missing. It was supporting the South Vietnamese troops. The Phantom, attacking the enemy supply trail, crashed due to unknown causes, and the two crewmen were recovered in good condition.

—An Army UH1 helicopter shot down in northeastern Cambodia, with one crewman wounded.

Crashed in Vietnam

—Two other helicopters crashed in South Vietnam with seven Americans killed.

The U.S. Command said 10 other Americans were killed and 21 were wounded in half a dozen enemy attacks, three of them against units of the 9,000-man U.S. force in the northwest corner of South Vietnam acting as a blocking force for the South Vietnamese in Laos.

The command said 7,487 US.. planes and helicopters have been lost in Indochina since Jan. 1, 1961. This includes about 500 in Laos and 57 in Cambodia.

The command also reported that 15 U.S. helicopters have been shot down and destroyed in the Laotian operation since it began Feb. 8, with a total of 19 Americans killed, three missing and 16 wounded.

Nine of these choppers went down in Laos, with 11 Americans killed, three missing and eight wounded. The other six crashed on the Vietnamese side of the border with eight Americans killed and eight wounded.

Sources said about 15 other U.S. helicopters have been shot down in the Laotian operation but were recovered. Casualty figures in these crashes were not available.

The U.S. Command said American helicopters have flown 5,600 missions into Laos in the past eight days. These missions include gunship attacks, resupply, medical evacuation, command and control and troop lifts. About 10 South Vietnamese helicopters are flying resupply missions compared to the hundreds of American aircraft.

Name, Rank, Number

Tippler's Treaty

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Dean F. Goulee was told Monday by a traffic court judge that he cannot employ articles of the Geneva Convention as defense against Wisconsin's implied consent statute.

Goulee, 43, charged with driving a car while under the influence of alcohol and with refusing to submit to a chemical test to determine intoxication, told Judge Louis J.Ceci the statute violates his rights.

"No man is required to give testimony against himself," the motorist argued. "Even a prisoner of war has to give nothing but his name, rank and serial number."

"That," Ceci commented, "is because they have the Geneva Convention. If you had signed the treaty with the United States, that might be a valid argument."

Ceci fined Goulee $150 and gave him a five-day jail sentence.

Three Lawmen Slain in Dallas

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A widespread alarm was out today for a 33-year-old ex convict accused of fatally shooting three of five kidnaped deputy sheriffs. One of the surviving deputies was wounded.

The deputies, seized while investigating a burglary, were taken to a river bottom where their captors opened fire.

Issuing a description of the fugitive, Sheriff Clarence Jones of Dallas County said, "It would be an understatement to say we want him bad."

Charged with murder, he was identified as Rene Adolpho Guzman. Authorities said he had a police record for burglary and assault.

Jones described the triple slaying Monday night as "needless killing" and "an execution."

Others Questioned

Four other men were being questioned, but Jones said, "The trigger man is the one we want."

Shot to death in a fusillade of revolver fire in the Trinity River bottoms were Dallas County deputies William D. Reese, 30, and Sam Infante, 32, and Ellis County Deputy A. J. Robertson, 59, of Waxahachie.

Deputy Wendell Dover, 49, of Ellis County was shot in the chest. His condition was described as fair.

The sheriff said Guzman had been charged in the killing of Reese and formal charges in the other slayings would be filed later.

A. D McCurley, 50, the only one of the kidnaped deputies who escaped death or wounding, said the incident began when Infante, Robertson and Dover went to a West Dallas home to question some men about a burglary.

They telephoned the Dallas County sheriff's office, asking for a blank form to be used in connection with a search for the stolen property.

Reese and McCurley answered the call. They knocked on the door and a voice inside said: "Come in."

Holding Gun

McCurley gave this account of the house and found the three other officers tied up in chairs with two men holding guns on them. McCurley and Reese also were tied up.

A third man entered the room and began to talk in Spanish with the other two. The third man made a negative motion indicating he wanted nothing to do with what was going to happen and left the house.

The five officers were ordered into a squad car by the two remaining men, who put Infante at the wheel.

Lucey Promises Pressure for Peace

MADISON (AP) — Gov. Patrick J. Lucey promised a veterans for peace group Monday he will "continue to keep pressure on the federal establishment" in an attempt to help end the Vietnam War.

Lucey termed the war "the most compelling problem we face today."

He said he would have no reluctance to sign legislation which would make it unlawful for a citizen of Wisconsin to be forced to fight in an undeclared war outside the United States.

Noting that the U.S. Supreme Court failed to uphold a similar law passed last year by the state of Massachusetts, Lucey said language of a Wisconsin law should be such that it would be "an effective instrument" for applying pressure on the federal government to stop the war.

Massachusetts Law

Three Democrats last week submitted legislation similar to the Massachusetts law in both houses of the Wisconsin Legislature.

Lucey told veterans he had received no response to a telegram he sent last week asking President Nixon to explain U.S. military involvement in Laos.

"I am really surprised at how readily the American public was able to sit back and accept Laos," he said.

The meeting with the veterans was held in the governor's cabinet room in the Capitol's east wing.

Lucey said he generally agreed with the veterans contentions that the Nixon administration appeared to have expanded the conflict with action in Cambodia and Laos.

Revulsion of Americans

"It's time to talk about the revulsion of the American people to the war," said Christopher Kasten of Madison, a member of the group.

"The people at the highest levels must begin talking angrily," Kasten said. 'It's absurd to talk in terms of symbolic gestures."

Lucey said he felt the United States' posture on the war was "more reprehensible" now than it was several years ago.

"The government permits the carnage to go on so long as their conscience is salved by a reduction in the kill ratio," the governor said.

Lucey noted that Wisconsin's budget for the next two years will be about $2 billion.

At the same time, he said, the same (Wisconsin) taxpayers will hand over $3 billion to (Defense Secretary) Mel Laird to run the Pentagon. It just doesn't make sense."

Lucey said he thought governors could bring pressure to bear on the federal government because "they can command a considerable degree of media coverage and it might have a telling impact."

He said he would attempt to convince other Democratic governors to exert such pressure at a meeting in Washington later this month.

Richard Larson of Madison, one of the veterans, asked Lucey what the group might do to help end the war if legislation against the war is again held unconstitutional.

"We've knocked on about every door," Larson said. "If this fails, what could you recommend?

"Dramatize your position short of violence," Lucey responded. "If your tactics are such that you alienate like-minded citizens, you defeat your purpose."

Kidnaped Airman Released in Turkey

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — A Texas airman kidnaped and held 17 hours by suspected leftist extremists was undergoing questioning today by U.S. Air Force investigators while Turkish police hunted the kidnapers.

Sgt. Jimmy Ray Finley, 24, an air policeman from Fort Worth, Tex., walked back to his base Monday night, apparently none the worse for his experience.

The Air Force gave no details of what he reported. But speculation in Ankara was that the kidnaping might have been the work of a group of leftists wanted for two recent bank robberies in the city.

The five-man gang is led by

former Istanbul University law student Deniz Gezmis and has been at large since its first successful bank raid Jan. 11.

Officials would say only that Finley's abductors were believed to be leftist extremists, active for the past year in terrorist attacks against American servicemen and their families.

Turkish police said at least three men took part in the kidnaping about 3 a.m. Monday at an American installation on the outskirts of Ankara.

The kidnapers entered the base apparently undetected and forced Finley into a truck while he was on guard duty. A few hours later the pickup truck was found empty and abandoned, its motor still running and with a flat tire 10 miles outside Ankara.

The kidnaping jolted the American community in Turkey.

"It's been building up to this," said a U.S. diplomat of the spreading wave of anti-American violence in Turkey. There have been bomb attacks against U.S installations and Americans have been roughed up, insulted and threatened.

Turkish police have reinforced Turkish troops guarding U.S. installations. Americans were not allowed to carry weapons for guard duty. Turkish police also are stationed at the residence of the U.S. ambassador.

Anti-Americanism first appeared in 1964 when many Turks resented the lack of U.S. support in their dispute with Greece over Cyprus. It has intensified with the growth of extremism in Turkish universities in the past two years.

War Documents Revealed

FDR Vetoed Ike on Italy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Franklin D. Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill overruled a World War II suggestion by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower that Italy be given peace with honor in return for surrender, secret wartime documents have disclosed.

The documents, made public by the State Department Monday, also show:

—Roosevelt was sharply critical of French Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

—The United States suggested Britain cut its tank production and order more American tanks.

—U.S. Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson accused the British of being only lukewarm on the planned D-Day invasion of Europe across the English Channel.

The documents show Eisenhower, then commander in chief of Allied Forces, proposed before the allied landing that Italy be promised a peace with honor should she surrender. He made the proposal in a May 17, 1943, letter to the combined chiefs of staff.

Roosevelt and Churchill disagreed, however, and sent a telegram to Eisenhower saying, "Most certainly we cannot tell the Italians that if they cease hostilities they will have a peace with honor. We cannot get away from unconditional surrender."

Letter to Churchill

The documents also contain a letter from Roosevelt to Churchill written May 8, 1943, saying, "I do not know what to do with de Gaulle. Possibly you would like to make him governor of Madagascar."

Roosevelt's letter also accused de Gaulle, later to become president of France, of stirring up trouble in Algiers.

On the issue of tanks, W. Averell Harriman, Roosevelt's personal representative, wrote Churchill that unless the British bought American tanks, "thousands of men will be thrown out of work . . . and politically it will be difficult for the President to explain . . ."

Stimson's letter to Roosevelt, dated Aug. 10, 1943, said of the British support of the D-Day invasion: "Though they have rendered lip service to the operation, their hearts are not with it."

Stans, Penn Central Link Investigation Suggested

WASHINGTON (AP) — A member of the Senate Commerce Committee has called for immediate hearings into Secretary of Commerce Maurice H. Stan's interest in a major Penn Central subsidiary and his role in government efforts to shore up the failing railroad.

Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., urged convening of the committee "at the earliest possible date to hear Secretary Stans' explanation of matters which on their face seem to indicate a strong possibility of impropriety."

Hartke is third-ranking Democrat on the committee which approved Stans' cabinet appointment in January 1969.

Hartke commented in a statement following disclosures by The Associated Press that Stans owned $318,000 worth of stock in Great Southwest Corp. on June 12, 1970, at the time his department was involved in administration plans to grant Penn Central $200 million in federal loan guarantees.

The railroad, which owns 90 per cent of Great Southwest, filed for reorganization under the bankruptcy act after the administration decided against the loan guarantees.

"The facts of the matter appear to be these," Hartke said. "At the time of his confirmation hearings Mr. Stans held either personally or in partnership approximately 38,000 shares of stock in Great Southwest . . . but he did not reveal these holdings in a financial statement he submitted to the committee."

At the same time, Hartke said, "Mr. Stans assured us that he would put all of his holdings into a so-called blind trust—that is, a trust the transactions and value of which he would have no knowledge.

"Apparently, however, that blind trust had eyes, for Secretary Stans revealed, no doubt inadvertently, to an Associated Press reporter knowledge of transactions that occurred nine months later," Hartke said.

The senator noted the value of Stan's investment in Great Southwest had gone from $570,000 in January 1969 to $318,000 in June 1970 and now—if he still holds the shares—to about $114,000.

It could not be learned whether Stans still has an interest in Great Southwest, a Texas real estate firm.

The Remains of a car in which a motorist died Monday when struck by a passenger train are examined by curious pedestrians Monday in Oak Creek, a suburb of Milwaukee. The car's engine was carried by the locomotive about a mile beyond the crossing. The victim, William J. Feely, 48, of St. Francis, was the sixth person reported dead in a state car-train accident within the week. (AP Wirephoto)

Called to Campus Protest

Wardens, State Patrolmen Win Praise

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The first test of the Wisconsin State Traffic Patrol and conservation wardens as a protective force against civil disorder has impressed state government leaders with their discipline and efficiency.

Seventy-five officers of the patrol were ordered to duty on the University of Wisconsin campus last week by Gov. Patrick Lucey, in the first important use of a special statute for emergency use They were joined by 25 conservation wardens.

A spokesman for the executive office said that the university administration, representatives of the student body and o her police officers were impressed with the cool performance of the state patrolmen, wardens and the most of whom were on duty for long hours.

Little Violence

Their summons came when university authorities were concerned about the possibility of disorders attending the student protest demonstrations against the extension of the Vietnam war into neighboring Laos. As events developed, fewer students took part in the demonstrations than during other campus protests in recent years, and reports of violence and disorder were minor.

Although the traffic officers and wardens are armed when they are on duty and are equipped with riot gear, officials who observed the campus patrols have concluded that activist students bear less resentment against them than they displayed when the men of the Wisconsin National Guard were summoned to control possible disorders on the campus during other demonstration incidents earlier One possible explanation is that most of the rank and file wardens and officers are more mature men than the guardsmen.

The first use of such protective auxiliaries was during threatened disorders on the campus of the Whitewater State University some months earlier.

Passed Easily

The authorization for the use of such state officers for riot duty was approved by the legislature in its 1969 session, following disorders at the state capitol and elsewhere, with relatively little dispute or opposition, a fact that privately surprised the commanders of the patrol, especially

In earlier years all proposals to delegate general police enforcement powers to the highway officers were strenuously resisted in the legislature.

Gov. Lucey made the decision to mobilize the wardens and State Patrolmen, when he filed the required determination that "there exists a condition of civil disorder or a threat to the safety of persons on state property or damage or destruction of state property," under the conditions of the law. Such an assignment of wardens or traffic officers to any other situation is not authorized under the special statute, but where state properties are involved, the wardens and the traffic patrolmen have all the powers of any other police officer except that they cannot be used in any labor dispute.

GOP Fears Democrat County Office Push

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Secure in their base of the governor's office until 1974, the Democrats will aim with painstaking care to increase their representation in the county courthouse offices in the 1972 elections, the new head of the Republican state party organization warned GOP county loyalists in a headquarters bulletin.

"We can expect unprecedented efforts from the opposition, using the governor's office as a power base, to recruit Democrat courthouse candidates in 1972," said John Hough

The new GOP chairman wrote as he announced the dates for the spring caucuses of the party organization in the 10 congressional districts.

The district delegate sessions will choose members of the state party committee who will serve through the 1972 elections Hough announced formally that he will be a candidate for a full-term election to his party office when the state committee reorganization meeting is held in Madison on June 2.

Big Lead

Republicans maintain a top heavy lead in county courthouse offices in the state, in spite of their strategic losses in statewide elections last November

Hough and other party chiefs believe the negligible erosion of Republican local office strength in defiance of the state ticket defeats of last fall shows a preference for the Republicans in the grass roots of the state

Pointing to the district caucuses, Hough said the GOP must "be ready for the Democrats" by electing the kind of leaders who will recognize the Democratic plan to recruit courthouse slates more aggressively.

Budget Cut

Hough also disclosed that the budget of the state party headquarters has been pared severely and some services dropped altogether, in financial retrenchment made necessary by a party debt of more than $600,000.

District conventions of the party scheduled by Hough include the eighth district on April 1 at the Riverside ballroom in Green Bay, the Sixth District at Goodrich High School, Fond du Lac, on March 29, and the seventh district at Nellsville high school March 28.

Budget Under $2 Billion Is Lucey's Goal

MADISON (AP) — Gov. Patrick J. Lucey said Monday he hopes to hold the state budget below the $2 billion mark for the 1971-73 biennium.

Lucey thus indicated he has come close to slashing nearly $200 million from the record $2.2 billion in funds sought by state agencies.

The Democratic governor recently received authority from the legislature to postpone delivery of his budget message until March 2.

"I'm hopeful of holding the budget below $2 billion," Lucey said.

Youth, Women, Minorities Not Represented

Democrat Delegate Selection Rapped

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wisconsin Democrats are feeling increased pressure from their national committee this week to amend the rules under which delegates are selected for the party's national presidential conven ions.

Donald O. Peterson of Eau Claire, Wis., chairman of the state's delegation to the 1968 convention in Chicago, is one of the chief draftsmen of a new formula on which the committee is to vote late this week.

Reforms in delegate selection include methods which would guarantee a larger share of representation for young voters, women and minority groups.

Some state political organizations have revised their quota systems, but national Democrats feel Wisconsin is being sluggish about change.

State Warned

Rep. Donald Fraser of Minnesota, chairman of the Democratic Reform Commission, has written to Wisconsin Democrats, warning them that failure to alter delegation quotas could lead to a challenge on the convention floor in 1972.

Robert W. Nelson, staff director for the so-called McGovern Commission, said Monday there should be changes in Wisconsin's primary election rules to reflect new reforms.

The reforms have created controversy, but most of the 110 national committee seem ready to adopt them, Nelson said.

The Peterson formula would, like the one-man one-vote pattern, gear sizes of delegations to population, thereby assuring larger states of a larger share of the delegate enrollment.

There would be greater representation for minorities. Women represent about half the voter turnout, but only 13 per cent of the 1968 delegates were women. Only 4 per cent were 30 years old or less, and only 5.5 per cent were Negro.

In Wisconsin, delegates are apportioned among congressional districts. The reform proposals would overide this, assuring heavily Democratic areas of greater representation than predominantly Republican areas.

The commission has also complained to Wisconsin Democrats about the manner in which their state administrative committee chooses some delgates.

The national committee is expected to issue its formal convention call this week, giving state organizations plenty of time before 1972 to respond to the reforms.

Jewish League Head Held for Harassing

NEW YORK (AP) — Rabbi Meier Kahane, head of the militant Jewish Defense League, has been accused of harassing a Soviet official outside the U.N. building.

Earlier this year the league, accusing the Soviet Union of mistreating its Jewish citizens, had staged a number of such incidents, but Kahane had called a one-month moratorium.

"We saw what happened when we called a truce for a month," he said after his arrest Monday on complaint by Vladimir Fedorov. "Everything died." He was ordered to appear in court March 3.

Mrs. Nixon Pleased With New Cook Book

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Mrs. Richard M. Nixon has received a gift book of recipes set down by first graders at the Martin Luther King School and cordon bleu cooking it ain't.

A sample:

"Bacon—put one piece of bacon in the skillet. Put two little spoons of hot pepper and three spoons of salt on it. It's done when it gets burned up. Take it out when you smell the smoke. Edward."

Mrs. Nixon sent a thank-you letter containing Nixon family photographs.

Of the recipe book, she said, "I will especially cherish the copy you sent me."

Paul Hassett Is Reluctant Chairman

Corporate Tax Foe Heads Economic Development Task Force Tax Study

BY JOHN WYNGAARD
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MADISON — Organization of the economic development task force of businessmen by Democratic Gov. Patrick J. Lucey has taken an ironic turn with the selection of a widely known Republican spokesmen for business enterprise and a foe of additional corporate taxation as chairman of its key committee on taxation.

Paul Hassett, for six years the executive secretary of Republican former Gov. Warren P. Knowles and now executive of the Wisconsin Manufacturers Association, was chosen to head the deliberations of the task force subcommittee on taxation since his election.

Hassett accepted the assignment unwillingly, according to persons who attended the meeting that was not publicly announced. In newsletters of the WMA since he took over its headquarters, Hassett has warned against the effects of higher taxation as suggested by Gov. Lucey. During his years as a key figure in the Republican administration. Hassett was instrumental in turning aside, with Knowles, all proposals for corporate tax revision of the kind that the Democratic administration intends to propose, according to the declaration of the new governor before and since his election.

Soon after his inauguration, Gov. Lucey told a conference of the Wisconsin State Chamber of Commerce that he would probably ask for higher income tax levies on corporations as well as individuals

The maintenance of the existing corporation income tax rate has been one of the keystones of the economic policy of Republican regimes, and had the tacit support of the occasionally intervening Democratic governors of the last decade and a half.

Gov. Lucey has inferred that he favors the idea of continuing the phased elimination of the personal property tax on farm livestock, merchandise stocks, and manufacturers' inventories, which was helped through legislative inaction two years ago.

But there is some doubt, administration officials report, that such a resumption of the graduated elimination of the levy will be possible this year because of the strained condition of the state treasury The program has thus far achieved the elimination of 60 per cent of such personal property tax liability, but only because the state provided equivalent replacement revenue to localities for the tax yields that otherwise were collected by local treasuries.

Present Rules Adequate

Proposal to Ban Pets From Parks Criticized

MADISON (AP) — Wisconsin wouldn't need stronger pet-control codes to protect state parks if current regulations were more thoroughly enforced the Department of Natural Resources was told Monday

About 76 persons showed up for a hearing on proposed codes that would ban dogs and other nuisance pets from state parks and forests, as well as snowmobiles, motorcycles and ATVs, or all-terrain vehicles

Most of the speakers objected to recommendations under which pets would be banned from parks between Memorial Day and Labor Day

The department said it receives complaints about dogs that snap at youngsters, run through camping areas, bark at night and are generally messy

Dogs currently are prohibited on state-park beaches A proponent of stronger prohibitions said summer camping last year for his family was the least enjoyable in a decade, and that others dogs were 80 per cent responsible

An opponent of stronger regulations said problems could be resolved if existing rules had better enforcement

Another opponent said he couldn't afford to go camping if he had to board his dog at a kennels during the family's absence

Alan E Bessey, Madison, said the state's tourist industry would suffer if families had to take outings without their pets

"Let's provide facilities for pets, special trails and walking areas," Bessey suggested

Other speakers said health hazards involving pets could be resolved if persons entering parks with dogs were required to show license tags and rabies vaccine certificates

The dog issue produced far more discussion than recommendations for prohibitions against snowmobiles and other motorized vehicles in state parks and some state forest areas.

A speaker suggested the state set aside "nuisance parks" for the vehicles

Miller Brewing Uses Fox Valley For Test Market

Miller Brewing Company's new beer Miller 81,000, is being introduced into the Fox Valley area today in a test marketing program

The test marketing is an expansion of an earlier, successful introduction of the beer in the western part of the state

The brewing company says Miller 81,000 is a natural process beer and is a modern contemporary of earlier brews which offered $1,060 rewards if it could be proven that any substitutes were used in the brewing process

What makes it distinctive for Miller is the departure from the traditional clear bottle The brand comes in a brown bottle

General sales and distribution are slated for March 1

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

World Champions

by IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

Bud Dietrich, famous magician, entertainer and master of ceremonies, sometimes performs feats of magic at the bridge table. Playing a hand against Bud's defense is always exciting, since one never knows when a rabbit may pop out of the hat.

Observe how Bud played the ancient shell game on today's unfortunate declarer. Bud held today's East cards.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of hearts.

After North's raise of his demand bid, South leaped directly to slam. He reasoned that the Blackwood convention would have limited value because of his heart void and that even if North did have both aces, South couldn't bid a grand slam with any certainty concerning minor-suit losers.

West opened the heart jack, dummy played the queen, covered by East's king and ruffed by declarer. The spade king was taken by East and a heart returned.

Declarer made the fine play of ruffing the heart instead of discarding. He reasoned that a more intelligent discard could be made after he knew more about the hand. A risky business against a magician!

Declarer drew the remaining trumps and played his ace and king of clubs. East followed with the six and QUEEN.

Declarer's careful play had apparently materialized. He had purposely saved his small club instead of discarding it on the heart ace to cover the possibility that East had originally held queen and another club.

If so, then four club tricks were available via a finesse against West's club 10. The diamond finesse would then be unnecessary, since one diamond could be discarded on the heart ace and the other on the club jack.

Declarer confidently led his club three and finessed against West's "marked" club 10. Horrors! Bud Dietrich sprung the trap and cunningly won his club 10 for the setting trick.

Note that if East had not played the club queen, declarer would have had to fall back on the diamond finesse. This would land the slam, since East had the diamond queen.

Anyone care to fill in a foursome with Bud Dietrich?

Your Problems ..

Helpful Hints for Phony Letter Writing

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please tell "Skunked and the Yalees" there are rules to follow if he wants to get a phony letter printed. Any idiot knows that the people who write real letters to Ann Landers are very upset, so rationality and common sense are out. Here are some Helpful hints:

1. Write on company stationery. No one in his right mind would.

2. Don't bother with correct grammar or spelling. A person who is shook-up makes lots of mistakes.

3. Sign your own name and ask Ann to make up one. She'll use "Dubuque Ding-A-Line" or "Appleton Angel-Puss".

4 Select a subject close to the people, something grassrootsy. Here's a sample letter

"Dear Ann Landers: When the bus loads up at a major stop, us commuters all get on so's we can get to work. I don't object when them clods squeeze in next to me and insist on taking ¾ of the seat. I don't even mind when they insist on unfolding the paper and start reading Ann Landers even though there ain't hardly room to move your head sideways. But when lots of people have got off and more than half the bus is empty why don't them jerks move to an empty seat? Do they think maybe it's some kind of fun being squeezed in like sardines?"

O.K. Annie — how's that for a lesson? — Chicago Reader

Dear Chic: Good enough to print. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was moved to tears by the letter from the 15-year-old who wrote to you the night her Dad died. I lost my wonderful father last year so I know exactly what that girl is going through. And now I would like to add a thought that might help her — and others.

Dear Friend: Your father is gone. There is nothing you can do for him now. But you can do a great deal for your mother. She has lost her mate — her partner. She will be lonely and sad after the relatives and friends stop coming — as they must and will. You can make your mother's life easier by giving her an extra measure of love and consideration. She needs it now more than ever. This may be hard for you, as it was for me, because I was a Daddy's girl. I'm sure my Mom knew I felt closer to him than to her. At times I miss my father so much I can hardly stand it but I know my heartache will heal faster than Mom's. I have a whole life ahead of me. She might not be able to rebuild her life without him. Her happiest days may be behind her. So do what you can to help. Your Dad is counting on you. — Bunny

Dear Bunny: Thank you for a touching letter. I'm sure many girls in the reading audience felt you were speaking directly to them.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My 19-year-old brother is on the verge of getting married to a tramp who has slept around all over town. He always dated lovely girls from nice families, girls he was proud to be seen with, and now he ends up with this.

My husband and I have tried to talk some sense into his head but it's useless. He says he knows all about the girl's black past but he would rather have a wife who has gotten the running around out of her system. He is sure she will be faithful.

Do promiscuous girls settle down after marriage, Ann? Or do virginal girls make the most faithful wives? — Asking in Aspen

Dear Asking: There's no way of knowing. Some promiscuous girls do settle down after marriage and some virginal wives become promiscuous. But this I can tell you — a 19-year-old boy is too young to be marrying anybody. The statistics on divorce among teen-agers is frightening. And the survival rate of adult marriages these days is nothing to brag about.

Fog Delays Keynoter for Family Living Seminar

BY CAROL HANSON
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

KAUKAUNA — Fog settled over the Minneapolis airport shortly after 7 a.m. Monday morning and changed plans for an in-service program on family living education that was to open at 9:30 a.m. As public and parochial school teachers of the Kaukauna School District waited in the high school auditorium, their keynote speaker sat at the end of a runway waiting for his plane to be given clearance for take off to Green Bay.

Dr. Richard Hey, head of the division of family living in the University of Minnesota's school of home economics, finally stepped before the congregated group at 12:15 p.m. — just three hours behind schedule.

Dynamics of Living

Considering the study of family living, the dynamics of living, acting and being, Dr. Hey told the teachers that it encompasses emotional and social relationships within and without the family. Included as areas of study are such things as birth, dating, marriage, child growth and development.

"However much we think of ourselves as pioneers in this field, we find the movement actually was active at the turn of the century."

It came about, he said, as a result of the problems of industrialization and the move from a rural to an urban society.

Anonymity was enhanced with this move and people found they could behave in ways that weren't accessible to them before.

As we went in the urban direction, he continued, children found observing their fathers at work more difficult and the jobs they did became more mysterious. Young people lost their grasp on that part of their fathers' lives.

More Women Employed

He pointed out that more females became employed and as a result were not so absorbed in their families. They found other avenues open to them.

Studies of child development and behavior began to appear and sociologists and psychologists began to look at the dynamics of family relations They were beginning to find that the human institution was not so sacred that it couldn't be examined.

Dr. Hey said that home economists were starting to observe family living, too, and were moving away from just being able to sew a fine seam. By 1920. child development had become a speciality within their field.

Sex education was also part of the scene at this time and, according to Dr. Hey, was one of the ways mental and community health problems could be examined.

Rapid changes were taking place as a result of technology, he said. Adults were becoming involved in ways of living for which they were not prepared

Buying Time

"I did not anticipate that I would find myself spending my income in order to make time," he said, as he suggested this was precisely what is being done when convenience foods are purchased and better and more expensive forms of transportation used.

"I didn't realize the kind of thing I keep hearing in my sporadic contacts with teenagers. They are beginning to see being able to spend money creatively as a more valuable marriage skill than just earning it."

With our social anonymity has come more sexual freedom. The seeds for this sexual openness, he believes, have been fostered by our improved ways of making a living and of making material goods.

"We're on the edge of helping to prepare young people for a world we can't imagine. Our American society is too complex with too many different choices available to young people for us to assume that doing what comes naturally is enough for them."

Calling the task of preparing students for a life that we as adults can't even anticipate impossible, Dr. Hey suggested that adults be helped to discover themselves so they can help children.

Because students learn from adults — not from what is taught but from what they observe — family living education gets down to parents' attitudes toward themselves as sexual beings and partners and is an inevitable part of the education a child receives in school simply because of the interaction during the learning processes.

Dr. Hey said that family living education should be coeducational and should be cooperatively developed by parents and teachers. Further, it should be geared to the stages of development while allowing for individual differences.

First Woman to Tackle Mt. Everest

By RODNEY PINDER
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — An international effort to conquer Mt. Everest by its most difficult route began Saturday when eight British television men left London for a rendezvous in Nepal. Journey's end could put a woman on the roof of the world for the first time.

The television men's job is to record the adventures of 32 mountaineers from 12 countries as they assault the world's highest peak by climbing its virgin — and treacherous—southwest face.

The enormous slab - sided front of 29,028-foot Everest is the Last Great Problem in mountaineers' jargon. The expidition's attempt to surmount it will be the subject of "the biggest coordinated television film ever made," said the British Broadcasting Corp.

It hopes that at least one television sound camera will be on the summit to bring triumph into the homes of millions.

To date, Everest has been conquered by way of the ridges which divide its three-faced triangle shape. The first team to climb it — a British expedition in 1953 on the eve of the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II—took the "easy" route over the southeast shoulder. So did the Swiss, Indians, Americans and Japanese in succeeding years.

On the difficult routes, the north face, slashed by ravines and ridges, is possibly the simplest. But the Communist Chinese rule its approaches through Tibet and Western climbers are unlikely to be granted access.

BBC instigated this expedition and arranged for its financing. The film unit—made up partly of BBC staffers who also are experienced mountaineers—will make a documentary for worldwide release.

The climbers come from Britain, Austria, France, India, Italy, Japan, Nepal, Norway, Poland—the sole Iron Curtain country—the United States, Switzerland and West Germany.

They include a parachutist-turned-mountaineer who could be the first woman on the roof of the world, Yvette Vaucher, 41, from Geneva, She will be accompanied by her school teacher husband Michel.

"I gave up parachuting to return to the mountains with Michel," she says.

Producing the BBC film is Ned Kelly, 36, an experienced mountaineer. He is helped by South African Antony Thomas, 30, who says: "This is the first truly international attempt on Everest. So many people have written and made films about Everest, but they haven't written or filmed the real stories about the climbers."

A bust of Communist Chinese Chairman Mao Tse-tung—said to have been left on the summit by a Red expedition in 1960; the rumored Yeti—the abominable snowmen and evidence of the mysterious Mallory and Irvine assault of 1924 will attract the cameramen.

In 1924, G.L. Mallory and A.C. Irvine, famed British mountaineers, were last seen through a gap in clouds "going strong for the top." It is known that the party reached at least within 900 feet of the summit—with only the most primitive oxygen equipment.

For this latest probe, the mountaineers leave Katmandu in a week's time, on a 200-mile, four-week approach march with 400 porters carrying 30 tons of supplies. The assault on the mountain itself begins April 12 and is scheduled to end May 21, with an extra nine days allowed in case of bad weather.

The climbers will be issued duck-down jackets and pants, three pairs of boots, crampons, windproof suits, goggles, masks, axes and sophisticated breathing aids.

Their base camp will be set at 17,500 feet, about the limit of human survival for any length of time without suffering progressive physical deterioration. Above 22,000 feet no one can spend more than a few days and nights.

From 21,100 feet the southwest face soars 8,000 feet overhead, with overhangs and the constantly moving Khumbi ice fall glacier ahead. American John E. Breitenbach died on this glacier in 1963 and seven Sherpas of the Japanese expedition of 1970 perished there under a collapsing ice wall. The glacier can not be skirted.

Britons Don Willans, 37, and Dougal Haston, 29, hope to be in the forefront of the assault from base camp to the summit. But Japan's Naomi Oemura, who topped Everest last year, is to the forefront in the summit stakes. So is the American geologist and electronics engineer, John Evans, 32, who works with Lockheed Aircraft Corp., and was with the American mountaineering party to the Antarctic in 1967.

Expedition leader Norman Dyhrenfurh, 52, a Swiss-American, intends to cover his options by sending another party by the west ridge, partly because it has never been mastered and partly to give an escape route to the southwest face climbers if they need to quit near the top.

The Ailing House

Two Pane Window Has Leak

BY ROGER C. WHITMAN

Q: What can be done to a Thermopane window which is becoming cloudy between the two panes? — Cakefield, Wis.

A: Somehow, the seal around the edges put on at the factory has been broken, permitting an air leak. All you can do is live with the present condition until you can have the entire unit replaced.

Q: You have described how dry wall was applied to block siding in the following manner: First, regular plastic roofing cement was spread on the block. This was followed by clear plastic sheeting, furring strips, Fiberglas wool insulation, then the dry wall. My question: Was there ever any odor from the roofing cement? — New Berlin, Wis.

A: None whatsoever. (I should know, as I was describing my own house.)

Q: The marble ledge in front of our fireplace is smoke-smudged. Apparently it was caused by workmen burning scrap lumber while building this new house. No cleaner I have tried has cleaned the marble. Can you help?—Peoria.

A: Work on it with household bleach, with solutions increasing in strength. For a good booklet on care and maintenance of marble, send 25 cents to Marble Institute of America, Pennsylvania Bldg., Washington, D. C. 20402.

Q: You have printed how to remove a white ring from furniture. But how about on a black lacquer tray? — Norfolk.

A: Spot spray it with thin bursts of black lacquer. If it appears a little duller than the rest, follow with a few sprays of clear lacquer.

Ballad Singer Passes Away In Ireland

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Ballad singer Delia Murphy, widow of a former Irish ambassador to the United States, died Saturday at the age of 68.

During World War II when her husband, Dr. T. P. Kiernan, was ambassador to the Holy See, Miss Murphy used her diplomatic immunity to help British prisoners of war escape from Italy to neutral Switzerland. In a recent television interview she said she hid the men under a rug in the back of her car.

She acquired an international reputation for her singing of such Irish ballads as "The Spinning Wheel" and "Three Lovely Lassies."

She was born in County Mayo. Recently she returned from residence in Canada to live with her daughter in a cottage on the banks of the Liffey River near Lucan.

Cause of death was not made public.

Teen Tunes Out Four Letter Lingo

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

How do you adjust to a word like romance—when you are the four-letter word type, asks a 17-year-old girl, who finds it quite a struggle. She is trying to discard the salty vocabulary.

She is being measured for the romantic look—choker, wagon-train challis, tendrilled hair. . .the whole bit. But somehow it doesn't fit.

"I began using profanity when I was 12 because everyone else was tuned in. But now I want out—I like the real girl idea."

She has been at work on her reform for four months using various methods, even tongue biting, and she still has a lapse of memory. It's something you can't discuss with anyone, she says, but she'll pass on her Vocabulary Anonymous treatment, as she calls it, to "interested parties."

The Switching Hour. . .Discover your peak four-letter time. For her, it was homework time, and in particular math.

Pennies for Thoughts . . . She penalizes herself 10 cents for every slip of the tongue and promises the money to charity. (It was her mother's suggestion, but it will keep you broke.)

Circuit Breaker . . . Certain people may make you feel more four-wordy than others do. Break the ties that bind, but remember that drop-dead are two four-letter words.

Liza Doolittle Technique: This one she stole from Shaw: Speak very slowly using the "rains in Spain" technique emphasizing each word, making yourself aware of what you are going to say. This one requires patience, but it works.

Cough Drop: When you begin to drop a word that might lead to the no-no, cough madly and grope for your handkerchief. It is good, but you could choke if it becomes a habit.

Drama Critic: Sit back and analyze your crowd in the school cafeteria as if they were on stage. Don't they sound gauche with their outdated obscene lingo? Persuade yourself they are light-years out of step. It will make the campaign easier.

The thing that really put her on the romantic kick was a remark she overheard her escort make at a party:

"Oh, yeah, she's fun to be with, but you couldn't take her home to parents . . . she uses worse language than I do."

City's Bond Issue to be Fought

Objecting to the policy of taking on long-term debt to buy drapes and fencing for the city, Ald. Judith Winzenz (12th) has announced plans to block a pending $1.3 million bond issue until a formal bonding policy can be considered.

Also objecting to a lack of information so far on the proposed bond issue, the council's only female member said this morning that it apparently includes items such as drapes, fencing, furniture and other small pieces of equipment and replacements for major equipment such as a fire department pumper truck.

Including such items in a bond issue, she said, is a departure from past policy and if it is to be changed the council should decide the policy change separately from action on the bond issue itself.

She said she will refer back to the finance committee at Wednesday night's council meeting the initial bonding resolutions that will be up for adoption.

At the same time, her resolution calling for a formal bonding policy will be submitted to the council.

She is asking that the new policy require that new bonding proposals take into consideration the city's current bonded debt, its projected debt for the coming five years, the life expectancy of items being financed along with their depreciated value when the bonds are paid off, and the cost of each item in relation to the total city budget at the time.

In addition, Ald. Winzenz is asking that before aldermen act on any bond issue they should be provided with a detailed list of items to be financed, along with their cost, the city's current indebtedness and a five-year capital improvements program showing projected future debt.

The five-year improvement and borrowing plan has been proposed repeatedly in the past and Finance Director David Champion currently has materials on file gathered by other departments for inclusion in such a plan.

Champion once said he planned to include the first year of the five-year plan in the current year's budget, but by the time the budget came before the council, the five-year plan had fallen by the wayside.

Asked recently when he planned to get around to the project, Champion said sometime this summer. He said he is currently occupied with getting his office organized for its day-to-day operations for the current year.

At the end of 1969, the five-year plan was supposedly given "top priority" for the start of last year by aldermen and the finance director.

Mrs. Winzenz objected to a lack of information about what the currently proposed bond issue includes. Items to be included in it were listed in the 1971 budget proposal from the finance department, but Mrs Winzenz said not all the items and costs add up to the totals listed in the bond issue.

She said she has deliberately declined to ask Champion for the information. "That should have been given out without anything said — automatically," she declared. She has criticized the finance office before for failing to inform the council.

She added that attempts to persuade Champion to discuss the bonding plans during last

New Push Due For Courthouse

Board to Get Plan Thursday

BY BILL KNUTSON
Post Crescent Staff Writer

Appleton Supv. Charles Wussow informed the Outagamie County Board's finance committee today that he intends to ask the board, during a special meeting Thursday night, to increase a proposed $3.9 million bond issue to cover the cost of building an entire new courthouse

With Wussow casting the only dissenting vote, the finance unit voted to recommend to the board that consideration be given to a series of resolutions review today, calling for the letting of bids on $3.9 million in corporate purpose general obligation bonds.

The 3-1 vote was not an endorsement of the bonding resolutions, but were merely a formal request that the board consider them.

It was on that basis that Supv. Eugene Kloes of Appleton, who shares Wussow's desire to build an entire courthouse rather than just a jail, voted with the majority.

"Some of us believe the jail resolution (calling for bonding of $2,277,500) should be expanded to include the entire courthouse," Wussow said after the finance unit had reviewed resolution forms prepared by Chapman and Cutler of Chicago, the county's bond counsel.

Wussow said he would not approve the bonding resolution on the board floor unless an increase is provided for an expanded county facility.

In response to a question from a committeeman, Wussow said that earlier estimates had placed the cost of an entire courthouse package at $3.6 million. "If you wanted some contingencies, you could make it $4 million," he explained.

Objects to Actions

Supv. Marvin Babbitt of Seymour objected to Wussow's attempts to change the bonding resolutions in the finance committee Such action he contended should come on the board floor.

Wussow also tried unsuccessfully to delay the bonding authorization until the regular March meeting of the board. He said he was surprised at the swiftness with which a special meeting was called and he

Committee OKs Plow Attachment, Council Vote Due

Giving in to continuing pressure, the Streets and Sanitation Committee recommended Monday that Appleton try out an attachment to keep graders from plowing driveways full of snow.

The decision, which goes to the City Council Wednesday, came on a 3-2 vote. The committee chairman, Ald. Norman Beyer (20th), broke a tie to swing the decision in favor of the purchase.

Ald. George Reynolds (7th) explained the resolution he put before the council two weeks ago and which was sent to the committee after an attempt to win immediate council approval seemed headed for a defeat.

The committee reversed two previous actions against the proposal, which Public Works Director Robert Miller has viewed skeptically.

Hold Back Snow

The attachment act as gates at the outer edge of the grader plow blade, dropping to hold back snow as the grader passes a driveway.

Appleton does most of its snow plowing with trucks pushing front-mounted plows, rather than graders. Miller said that as a result the gates are of little value unless the city buys more graders, which he said would be useless in the summer while trucks can work year-round.

Reynolds, a candidate for re-election in April, cited a municipal affairs magazine article that reported Spokane, Wash., uses the gates with considerable success. Spokane also does its plowing with graders, using a number of second-hand machines in its fleet.

Reynolds said he isn't recommending that Appleton purchase a fleet of graders, though he said Spokane claimed its operation saved money. "If buying graders will save the City of Appleton money when it comes to plowing snow, maybe we'd better give it two looks," he added.

$600 Attachment

He also argued that while the $600 cost of buying one of the attachments isn't in the public works budget, the finance office reports that that sum can be found somewhere.

Miller reported that efforts to find a similar attachment for a truck-mounted plow have been unsuccessful so far. Several local manufacturing firms have been asked if they would be interested in designing such a device, but they backed away because of possible patent infringements, Miller reported.

His comments were in response to Reynolds' reference in his resolution to the truck-mounted equipment search which is "supposedly being conducted."

Reynolds said he used the phrase because at the time he wrote the resolution, investigation showed nothing had been done He said he is grateful for the effort Miller has made since then.

Aldermen Orville Strutz (17th) and Al Stoegbauer (4th) voted in favor of the test purchase and Aldermen Judith Winzenz (12th) and Richard Schouten (19th) were opposed, with Beyer breaking the tie.

The proposal still faces a major council hurdle, with the votes of six of the 20 aldermen all that is needed to defeat it once again. An unbudgeted expenditure requires a three-fourths majority to pass.

"Let Me Outa Here!" appears to be the exclamation of Patty Kuehnl, a pupil at Appleton's Columbus School. Actually, she was hamming it up for Post-Crescent photographer Robert V. Baeten, who was photographing the playground. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Kuehnl, 120 E. Hancock St., Appleton.

Oil Company Founder Dies

Dale E. Andrews Of Kaukauna Was Community Leader

The founder of the Kaukauna-based Andrews Oil Co. and Andrews Appliance Center, Green Bay, Dale E. Andrews, 76, of 106 Doty St., Kaukauna, died Monday in Appleton after an extended illness.

Andrews, a Brillion native, founded his Kaukauna oil business in 1924 after serving in the Army in France during World War I.

By 1930 the firm expanded as a distributor and jobber for Phillips Petroleum Co. and was operating a bulk plant in New Franken.

Within a decade Andrews established plants at Luxemburg and Green Bay to market oil and gasoline. In 1937 the firm was expanded to include sales of LP gas and the Andrew Appliance Center was founded in Green Bay.

Active in Community

Andrews served throughout his lifetime in numerous business and civic organizations.

He was a past president of the Wisconsin Petroleum Association and a trustee for the Wisconsin Petroleum Association Insurance Trust.

Andrews had been chairman of the Outagamie County Republican Party.

For 27 years he was a member of the Board of the Committee Votes to Reduce Commercial Trash Pickups

Reaffirming its earlier support for reducing garbage collections for commercial establishments, a City Council committee also received tentative proposals Monday for major changes in the city's disposal site operations.

Among other possibilities, Public Works Director Robert Miller told the streets and sanitation committee that the Mackville landfill could be opened to accept refuse from outside the city, for a fee.

The chief hindrance at present is devising a workable means of identifying Appleton residents and trash haulers who would be exempt from the fee, Miller said.

Ald Judith Winzenz (12th) suggested a sticker system of identification Ald. Al Stoegbauer (4th) added that if waste is accepted from outside the city, it should be weighed at the landfill and the fee charged according to weight.

License Renewal

Miller said the city's state license is up for renewal July 1, and it is expected to be granted. He pointed out that other communities in the county need disposal sites and if the city can recover the cost of allowing Mackville to be used, he would favor it

The committee meanwhile reaffirmed it support for the commercial collection cutback, after Ald Glenn Thompson (13th) asked questions that he said promoted him to send the proposal back to the committee at the last council meeting

Subject to council approval, the committee again recommended allowing commercial establishments only one garbage collection per week, eliminating both a second pickup that has been provided free and additional collections that have been made for a fee.

The committee also recommended closing the Mackville landfill an hour earlier than at present, at 3 p.m., after Miller said an average of only six vehicles per day arrive at the site after that hour. The move would save overtime pay for landfill workers, he said

The effective date of both changes would be April 1.

Save Man-Hours

Miller said the extra garbage collections for commercial places costs the city 93 man-hours per week. Eliminating them would save the equivalent of 2.3 men on the sanitation crews and make it unnecessary

Plan Agency Creation Up to Local Officials

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH — Some of the fog which has enveloped the future of regional planning in the area was lifted Monday at an informational gathering of state agencies' representatives and county and municipal officials.

State representatives explained how a new areawide planning organization might be formed to satisfy state and federal requirements, but they made it clear that it's up to local officials — not the state — to take the initiative, unless Gov. Patrick Lucey indicates differently.

Secondly, it was emphasized that locally elected officials — county, city, town and village — must ponder the alternatives and make the decision — not residents, planning commissioners or planners.

The meeting was called by Oshkosh Common Council President Byron Murken to poll interest in forming a new regional planning agency covering the eight counties in the Lake Winnebago administrative district for state services.

'Special Interests'

"It's up to the elected officials in the counties to decide if they want this," Murken said He earlier had noted concern about "special interests" which were trying to control the decision.

The problem facing officials is that the region is served by two planning agencies — Northeastern Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission and the Fox Valley Council of Governments (COG) — and soon must form a new planning agency and new boundaries to maintain area counties' and communities' eligibility for federal funds

There have been other attempts at a solution, including merger talks between Northeastern and COG, but Murken and state officials indicated that local officials must pick up the ball Murken proposed a meeting next week of the eight-county region's top municipal and county officials to "kick this thing around."

The lengthy session Monday included explanations of state and federal goals in planning, a review of what has occurred in the formation of the administrative districts for state services and multi-county regional planning agencies, and questions about the effects of the districts on future planning.

Charles Hill, secretary of the State Department of Local Affairs and Development, said that multi-county regional planning is essential for an area to get federal aids and grants.

Asked later how critical the need for a new agency with no planning overlap is, he said: "Without an areawide plan, the counties stand to lose a great deal in federal aid. The communities could just be cut off basic capital improvements grants."

He said he didn't know if the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, a major federal granting agency, would extend the July 1 deadline.

He declined to predict if the state would take a stronger hand in the absence of local action. He said he first would have to talk with Lucey. He noted earlier, however, that he suspected the new governor would "like to see some kind of compatable arrangement with the administrative districts."

Despite assurances by Hill and others that Northeastern, which has only four of its nine counties in the Lake Winnebago district, won't necessarily be put out of business, Gordon Bubolz, chairman of the non-metropolitan regional planning agency, defended the "tremendous accomplishments" of the agency and said the northern counties contributed an important part to the total effort. Some area agency serving the mid-Fox Valley.

Bubolz emphasized the importance of protecting the environment, which he said Northeastern had done, and offered to step aside as head of the agency or a new agency in favor of a county board chairman — an elected official. Bubolz and other Northeastern commissioners are appointed by the governor.

Murken chastized Bubolz for promoting his own commission at what was an information meeting and question-and-answer period.

"It appears that we have a lack of communication," he said He then noted Bubolz's remarks criticizing bureaucratic

Suit Is Threatened By Brillion Teacher

BY DIRK VAN SUSTEREN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

BRILLION — School officials remained tightlipped Monday over the suspension of Frank Boyle, a controversial, 25-year-old English teacher at the high school

But Boyle today threatened a suit to retain his job He said he was in contact with a representative of the American Civil Liberties Union.

The school board, which met for two hours Saturday with Boyle, scheduled another meeting today, after which Boyle's status was to be announced

Boyle, who had been with the school only three weeks, came under fire last week for what one member of the school board termed his "methods and ideas of teaching."

Brillion students responded Friday to the rumored suspension by calling a sitdown strike in the school gymnasium at the start of school. Supt of Schools Gaylord Unbehaun noted that the sitdown lasted only 15 minutes and that the move was initiated by a small number of students.

William Hertel, Chilton, attorney for the school board, said today that he had met with a Madison lawyer who was representing Boyle Unbehaun's situation Monday was "no comment," the same as it had been over the weekend

In a statement today, Boyle said

"Saturday the board had asked me for my resignation At the meeting I explained to them my philosophy of education, which contrasted to theirs."

"I could probably quit, but they would have to pay out my contract."

The Candidates for Executive . . . II

Roemer Wants More Services Handled by the County

BY CLIFF MILLER
Post Crescent Staff Writer

Ald Robert Roemer, one of the 12 candidates for election as the first Outagamie County executive, is basing his bid on proposals to elevate several public services from the local municipal to the county level

Each of Roemer's proposals has been discussed at one time or another. Some still are under serious consideration Several are controversial

The 60-year-old former Appleton mayor said the county ought to provide property assessment, health, welfare, police, waste disposal, fire protection, library and planning services now either provided only by local governing units or administered in sometimes overlapping fashion by both local and county government

He said he doesn't believe all the changes should come about at once, but county officials should begin thinking about all of them now.

"These are just ideas, and some of them should be done at the present time," he said A county fire department, for instance, might be impractical in the near future But police, welfare, health and library services could be lifted to the county level now, he believes. And state legislation drawn from the Tarr Task Force report makes a county assessor possible, he said

He considers the county assessor the most important on the list

Untrained Assessors

At present, each community in the county has its own elected assessor, Roemer said "and a lot of them are not trained to do this thing the way it should be done"

If the county took up its option recently granted by the state to appoint an assessor and equipped him with a staff of trained professional assistants "everybody would be assessed on the same basis," Roemer said

"I believe this would have an effect on the taxes and would take some of the burden from the now overburdened property tax," he said

County police and fire services have been studied by the

Robert Roemer

Fox Valley Council of Governments, he noted Providing full time service in communities now receiving volunteer services for fire protection might be one advantage he said

Waste disposal also falls logically in the county's domain, in Roemer's opinion "Everybody has to get rid of waste," he said

The county is currently considering library services, Roemer said more services would be available for all county residents if the county, rather than a few of its larger communities, was in charge of the library

He also said that all county communities would be better off if planning were performed at the county level

While he said he isn't sure whether the county should entirely take over the present Appleton planning department, the two certainly should be dovetailed

Roemer, executive secretary of the Wisconsin Concrete Paving Association was an alderman six years, then was elected mayor and served 12 years He has served another four years as alderman since leaving the mayor's office

Currently president of the City Council, he was a city representative on the defunct City-County Safety Building Committee, and favored building the joint facility immediately east of the present courthouse on Jones Park

He sees the newly created county executive's job as one requiring diplomacy and a knack for public relations

"The first county executive is going to have to move very carefully," he said expecting the County Board to be suspicious at first

He will have to go to the board and seek its cooperation

That's the secret of the whole thing — cooperation," he said "If he wants to get things done, he got to get along with the County Board."

On the other hand, he said the law spells out clearly enough of the responsibilities of each One is the legislative branch, the other the executive, he said

One reason the new job was created was to give identity to county government Roemer said one way the new executive can accomplish that end is through his responsibility as ceremonial head of the county As a mayor represents the city at public events, the executive should be present for the county, he said

Many of Roemer's proposals have been suggested by Appleton officials but rejected or ignored by the county

Asked how he would work to smooth city-county relations, he said, "Talk to these people, get their ideas, try to get them to think more county-wide, instead of their own provincial thinking."

Operators to Check NM Sewage Plant

NEENAH-MENASHA — Northeastern Wisconsin sewage plant operators gathered today at the Twin Cities Garfield Avenue plant for a regional conference.

Local people showed off the new, $157,000 chlorination facility that disinfects all wastes coming to the plant. Plant Manager Ron St. Laurent said it went into use last Friday. The state's original deadline was Oct. 1969. This was extended to June 1970.

The Northeastern operators will discuss problems and solutions among themselves. From a brief survey, they sounded familiar.

Les Templeton, Manitowoc's sewage plant manager, talked of Department of Natural Resources deadlines for complete treatment (Dec. 31, 1972 for him), a proposed $5 million addition to the plant, the difficulty of finding money to finance both schools and waste water treatment (and the politicians' avoidance of the subject), the slowness of state and federal approval machinery and the uncertainty of grants.

Consoer & Townsend are the engineers for Manitowoc as well as the Twin Cities. Templeton said they had just submitted their preliminary report. "We'll never make the deadline," he said, and in the same breath hoped the state would see progress aand not begin prosecution.

Patching Crews are kept quite busy these days as the tardy January thaw, combined with heavy traffic, leaves gaping potholes in Twin City streets and trains wary motorists in the art of preserving tires and shock absorbers. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Council to Vote on Apartment Zoning

MENASHA — The common council is again ready to act on rezoning of land at 636 Nicolet Blvd., to allow for construction of a 24-unit apartment building there. It will take a three-quarter vote (at least nine "yes" votes). Six months ago, the vote was 9-2 in favor.

A public hearing on the request from the Bockl Development Corp., Saukville, was held at the library Monday, and an attorney representing residents of the area said they would take the matter to court if it were approved by the council.

Atty. William Giese cited two state Supreme Court decisions, the latest one involving an industrial rezoning in Oshkosh in 1970, that he said indicated the court's disapproval of "spot zoning."

Spot Zoning

He said the case at 636 Nicolet Blvd. was one of "spot zoning."

He said the purpose of a zoning ordinance was to add "permanence, stability and finality of design" to a neighborhood, and that the construction of an apartment building along Smith Park, in a residential neighborhood, would be changing the "character of the neighborhood."

Russel Flom, 398 Park St., a member of the park and recreation board, said the area's residents were not opposed to an apartment building, but that the area along Smith Park was not the place for one. He said residents were "committing ourselves to work" towards finding another site for the apartment would allow acquisition of the 636 Nicolet site for addition to Smith Park.

Smith Park

Flom, who said he was "proud of Smith Park and its beauty," noted that the park and recreation board had already come out in favor of acquiring the site for the park. He also produced a petition signed by 17 members of the Neenah-Menasha Garden Club asking that the site be added to the park, and noted that the Menasha Historical Society had asked the same thing.

Flom said "with the right kind of cooperation, we can get an apartment in the Third Ward or elsewhere" and still maintain the character of the park.

William Herziger, 342 Park St., said he believes "it is wrong to take property that is better suited for recreation and park use for commercial use."

Spoke in Favor

Charles Heinz, a First Ward resident and the only person to speak in favor of the apartment at the sparsely-attended hearing, said Smith Park could be improved more by adding playground equipment there than by stopping the development of an apartment building along its boundary.

Joseph Sensenbrenner, a Neenah attorney representing Bockl, said they "are not attempting to take anything away from the park" and said the building "may even be an improvement on the present building" there (a two story house).

Mayor James Adams, a strong proponent of the proposed apartment, had prepared a two-page list of all property assessments in the Smith Park area and handed them to aldermen before the public hearing began. They were not brought up during the hearing.

$300,000 Value

Adams has claimed that the $300,000 apartment would be a substantial and necessary addition to the local tax base. The average property assessments for the blocks in the Smith Park area varied from a low of $13,482 for 42 properties on Oak Street to $33,060 for 19 properties on Park Street.

Approval of the rezoning request will require a three-quarter vote of the common council because an adjacent property owner, Mrs. Margaret Sensenbrenner, 628 Nicolet Blvd., filed a petition against the rezoning.

Menasha Mayor Bucks L L Bridge Approach

MENASHA — Mayor James Adams says he is "not pleased with where the approach goes" on the east side of the proposed Little Lake Butte des Morts bridge. He plans to introduce a resolution to that effect at tonight's council meeting.

Adams, who has been and still is a strong proponent of the proposed $11 million total project, said he was "originallly under the impression" that the east side anchor would "tie into Racine and Ninth" streets.

The preliminary plans produced by the District 3 state highway office in Green Bay called for the temporary touchdown at County Trunk "P", and Tayco Street.

"I don't like the fact that you have to go around the County Trunk curve out there to get to the bridge," Adams said of the Racine Street ("P") tie-in. He said it would create traffic problems.

If the Winnebago County board of supervisors approves an additional $900,000 funding for the bridge at today's board meeting, Adams will bring in a resolution tonight asking the state highway commission to reconsider that part of its preliminary plan.

Temporary Tie-in

State highway officials told local officials at a meeting two weeks ago that the east side tie-ins at Racine and Tayco streets would be temporary until work on the Tri-County Expressway is started.

Adams said he wondered if that meant local communities would be responsible for funding new tie-ins or modifications when the system is made permanent. He also said, "I was a bit disturbed that it's going to come in at grade. . ."

"I seriously question this particular plan," Adams said, not going into further detail but saying there were "several things I don't like" about it.

Will this affect the city's commitment of $700,000 as its share of the bridge construction project?

"I don't know how the council will act on this," Adams said.

Drug Study Scheduled In Neenah

NEENAH—The Neenah joint school district and the Neenah PTA Council will jointly sponsor a program entitled a "Spotlight on Drugs" Wednesday afternoon and night.

School will be dismissed at noon for the in-service program for teachers and school administrators.

Dr. Melvin Weinswig, University of Wisconsin — Madison, and Michael McCann, district attorney, Milwaukee County, will speak during the afternoon program for teachers, and Wineswig will speak during the program for the public Wednesday night.

The program has been in planning for months and follows several drug programs. The Neenah PTA Council set up a program on drugs this fall for parents and children.

It involved a panel presentation and then discussion with members of the audience. The program was presented to each public school in Neenah.

The "Spotlight on Drugs" also follows several months of work by a special committee of the school district on the drug problem.

The program for the teachers Wednesday will be held from 12:45 to 4 p.m. in the Shattuck High School auditorium. Supt. Donald Scott will preside over the program.

Scott said that teachers and administrators from parochial schools are welcome to attend the program.

A reaction panel has been set up for the afternoon program and includes Carlton Counard, chairman, Therese Brehm, Ed Mueller, Austin Wheaton, Caroline Brown, Nancy Hoyman and Nancy Tebo.

The program for parents and other interested people will be from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. in the Shattuck auditorium. Presiding will be Carlton Palenske. He and his wife ar co-chairmen of the PTA Council and were instrumental in getting the panel program for the schools set up.

Sewer User Fees Given in Menasha

MENASHA — Mayor James Adams did get a couple of questions on the sewer user fee ordinance he unveiled for the first time Monday night. Heavy discussion of the proposal is expected at the 7:30 p.m. council meeting tonight, however.

The proposed ordinance, drawn up by Adams himself over the weekend after discussions with local industrial leaders and sewerage and water plant officials, calls for:

—A user fee for residential users from July 1 to Dec. 31 based on the metered number of gallons of water used in the winter quarter. That would be 49 cents per 1,000 gallons of water used.

In 1972, when Adams hopes the plant will be a complete, revenue-producing operation, the charge will be determined annually, based on capital and operational needs of the treatment plant.

Sewer Quantity

—An industrial user fee based "on the liquid quantity of waste discharged into the sanitary sewers. . ." The charge from July 1 through Dec. 31 will be 14.03 cents per 1,000 gallons of water.

Beginning in 1972, rate charges can be revised "at least annually," based on operation and outlay costs for the plant.

—Bakeries, laundramats, carwashes and similar commercial establishments "who have high liquid quantity, B.O.D. (biochemical oxygen demand) or suspended solids waste discharges shall be subject to all industrial requirements of the ordinance, "as may be deemed necessary by the commission, or an individual case basis."

Compute Costs

—The costs for treatment of industrial sewerage shall be computed by the industry itself, subject to sewerage commission verification. These costs shall be computed according to a determination of flows, B.O.D. and suspended solid contents made by the industries themselves.

—Industries must report water flows they are sending to the plant (in gallons), five-day BOD discharges, in pounds, and suspended solid contents.

The ordinance goes into detail on the sampling and measuring the industries must do to inform the sewerage commission of their contributions to the sewerage plant. All equipment necessary will be paid for by the industry.

Provisions are made for measuring water that is taken from private wells and waterways (Fox River) and sent to the plant. This is something the previous proposed ordinance, providing for a user fee based on 100 per cent of the plant's water bill, did not adequately provide for, Adams contended.

—Industries must make monthly reports to the sewerage commission on what they're sending to the plant.

An industry is defined in the ordinance as any contributor which sends more than 3 million gallons of liquid waste to the plant in one year.

decision superseding the people's say, adding that the Bubolz presentation was "a beautiful example of someone trying to protect his own bureaucracy."

He praised Eugene E. Franchett, COG executive director, for honoring the purpose of the meeting.

To a Northeastern commissioner's question, Craig Adams, of the State Department of Administration's planning bureau, said that the watershed is only one criterion and not an over-riding factor. Economic, social and other factors also must be considered when establishing regional planning agency boundaries, he said.

Alvin Karetske, director of local and regional planning under Hill, said that in the southwestern part of Wisconsin, there was a strong county-level control of the planning. He suggested that this could be a model approach for multi-county planning throughout Wisconsin.

James Kennedy, associate administrator of St. Agnes Hospital, Fond du Lac, said that in a regional health planning agency, there must be 51 per cent consumer representation.

He said also that the agency must certify need for items, and "this we feel will be a very important aspect" because it will allow local control of the construction and health care delivery costs.

Supervisors to Make Push for Bonding for New Courthouse added that he saw no need for such haste.

Some supervisors had indicated a desire to act fast in order to take advantage of what they saw as a favorable bond interest market.

Babbitt called Wussow's efforts to slow consideration as "delaying tactics."

The board at its meeting which starts at 7 p.m. Thursday will be asked to seek bids on 780 bonds of $5,000 each having an interest rate of not more than 7 per cent.

The bonds to be dated April 1, 1971, would mature serially on April 1 of each year from 1972 through 1990 in amounts of $20,000 and on April 1, 1991 at $100,000. Interest would be payable Oct. 1, 1971, and semi-annually thereafter.

Sealed bids would be received through 1:30 p.m. March 9, the date of the next regular county board meeting. At that time, it is anticipated, the board would open bids and approve a bond award.

The board will have to act on seven resolutions, six of them specifying specific bonding amounts for specific purposes. The first will ask for $2,277,500 to build and equip the jail.

The remainder of the proposed $3.9 million issue would be spent as follows:

—$40,000 to finance some remodeling and plumbing and heating changes in the courthouse.

—$1,200,000 to repay short term notes on the construction of hangars a runway extension and other equipment at the airport.

—$200,000 to repay a short term note covering the cost of an addition to Plamann School.

—$175,000 for the purchase and construction of off-street parking near the courthouse.

—$87,500 to cover short term note for construction of the county highway office building.

Herbert Hansen, Chapman and Cutler attorney, told the committee that a two-thirds vote of the entire board membership (32 of 47 supervisors) will be needed to pass the six initial resolutions detailing the expenditures, while a simple majority will be needed for passage of the seventh, which seeks approval for the overall bonding.

Board Vice Chairman Jerome Hiler died this month and his seat remains vacant. Hansen said, however, that the two-thirds vote needed for the initial resolutions would still be based on the authorized board membership of 47.

County Administrator Alvin Woehler said he expects a Moody rating on the county's proposed bond issue Thursday or Friday. He said he anticipates an AA bond rating, the second highest given.

Woehler also presented a "mock-up" prospectus that his office and the county treasurer's office prepared relative to the bonding.

Appleton Man Bound Over For Trial

An Outagamie County investigator testified this morning during a preliminary hearing for James Satorius, 21, 1209 N. Morrison St., that he discovered Satorius hiding behind pipes in the northern section of the Fox Tractor-Farm Division of Koehring Co., 3800 W. Wisconsin Ave., the night of Nov 29.

Authorities had been dispatched to the firm when an activated alarm raised suspicions of a burglary in progress.

Satorius is charged with burglary. He was returned last week from the Central State Hospital where a judge previously directed he undergo a mental examination. County Judge Gustave J. Keller, after the hearing today, bound over the case to County Judge Nick F. Schaefer. No date was immediately set for further proceedings. Satorius is in the count jail on $1,500 bail.

Daniel Carpenter 23, 744 E. Franklin St., was sentenced to seven years in the Green Bay Reformatory Feb. 2 for the Fox Tractor break-in and 24 other convictions, 23 of them felonies.

On the 29th, authorities said they discovered that a safe in the credit union office of the northwest side firm had been tipped onto its side. Carpenter was taken into custody after he bolted from the building.

"The whole thing is based on a great deal of misunderstanding on the part of the people of Brillion and everyone involved in the situation. I see my role as sort of a guinea pig."

Boyle graduated in 1967 from Superior State University and received a masters there in 1968. He did a year's work on his doctorate at the University of Wisconsin. He was in VISTA volunteer for four months.

He spent "a few months" in the Marines and got an honorable discharge for medical reasons.

He said he ran for the State Assembly on the Democratic ticket in Price, Rusk and Sawyer counties, and lost by 2 per cent of the vote.

One student who supported Boyle and participated in the sitdown strike said he liked Boyle because "he didn't put himself on a higher level than us. We could call him by his first name. He really understood, and he was the only teacher we felt we could talk to.

He said Boyle never had discipline problems because whenever he said something, "there was a reason behind it."

Another student said he though Boyle ran into trouble 'because we discussed things like communes, the draft and the U. S. Constitution.

"Everything we put in our school newspaper is censored by the administration, and he helped us think about starting our own."

One student said he heard Boyle had ordered the books, "The Godfather," "The Population Bomb" and "Black Like Me," for the English class and that he thought the administration disapproved. The student said that one teacher called these books "bunk."

Regarding the sit-in demonstration, one student said, "People think Boyle called in the television, but it was us; we heard he was fired, so a bunch of us called the press thinking it might help us."

The student explained that many students supporting Boyle, including student council members and athletes.

Commercial Trash Pickups May be Cut to hire two men transferred last year from sanitation routes to the landfill, he said.

The fees for extra commercial collections, he added, total $83 per week, against a cost of $400.

Eliminating the extra collections will require many businesses to hire private refuse haulers, Miller acknowledged. He told Thompson that both the city and private haulers could handle refuse stored in specialized containers the city has been encouraging large refuse producers to acquire, and that continuing the program might be to the advantage of some establishments whether the city or private haulers take their refuse.

Thompson had asked whether continuing the "containerization" program would be advisable after service is cut back.

Miller also said he doubts the city should increase its fees and go back into the special collection service later, on a self-sustaining basis, thought he said it could be done. He said once the city drops the service, it is in effect inviting private haulers. It would be unfair for the city to reinstate service unless the private firms can't handle the job, he said.

"The only reason cities exist is to do things for people that they can't do for themselves," Miller said.

He also stated the city's commercial customer list should be made available to the private haulers on request. One of the private collectors, Henry Kuhn, of Ace Disposal Service, Little Chute, attended the meeting.

In a related action, the committee also reaffirmed its recommendation to buy a front-end loader for $32,583, after having rented the loader for several months in order to upgrade the Mackville site from common dump to landfill status last year.

Ald. Bruce Stutzman (1st) had sent the measure back to the committee at the last council meeting, but he was attending another committee meeting Monday and neither appeared nor sent an explanation of his action to the streets and sanitation group.

City's Bonding To be Fought

year's budget discussions were pushed aside with promises to discuss them later.

The initial resolutions, approved at the Feb. 3 council meeting for official publication, include only general descriptions such as "fire engines and other equipment" and "completing the municipal service building," along with the total to be borrowed, without listing details.

Mrs. Winzenz said that when items like drapes, fire hose, a refrigerator, fence, furniture and similar items are financed by bonding, "after you've paid off the bond issue, you have nothing to show," because the items have worn out or lost their value.

They should be bought on a pay-as-you-go basis, she said.

She added that state law limits the amount the city may be in debt at any time, and she fears that continual borrowing for small or short-lived items could push the city to its debt limit after a few years.

"It may keep the tax rate down this year and next," she said, but she asked what happens when the bond limit is reached.

Champion has said in Finance Committee meetings that his aim is to maintain an even debt level in relation to the city's tax rate and taxable valuation, but he has never produced figures publicly to show how it is to be accomplished.

Heart Fund Goal in State Has Been Set at $870,000

Sunday will mark the peak of the annual Heart Fund drive throughout the nation.

Locally, volunteers will canvass homes in the Town of Center throughout February to seek support against the country's number one killer, diseases of the heart and blood vessels.

Mrs. Carl Nelson, route 3, Appleton, who heads the campaign here, said that each volunteer will call on the homes of neighbors from now until March 1, to accept the gifts for the Heart Fund and to distribute a pamphlet giving valuable information on the heart problem.

"The collection will augment the total already received in the first half of the month-long campaign which supports the expanded research, education and community service programs of the Wisconsin Heart Association," Mrs. Carl Nelson, township chairman said.

The 1971 Heart Fund goal for the state has been set at $370,000.

At homes where residents are away, the volunteers will leave a pre-addressed envelope in which contributions can be mailed to the Heart Fund.

PSC Vetoes Motor Carrier Proposals

OKs Raising Charges For Interstate Truck Carriers of Freight

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — In approving increases in charges for Wisconsin intrastate motor truck carriers of freight, the state Public Service Commission disapproved several of the proposals of the Wisconsin Motor Carriers Association on the type and the extent of the increases authorized.

The commission used its own formula in authorizing increases in charges that are expected to yield almost $3 million a year in additional revenues for freight service within Wisconsin.

But it ordered rates calculated on a ratio of a 95 per cent operating expense ratio instead of the 93 per cent asked by the carriers, declined to authorize an additional surcharge for small volume shipments, and rejected the application of the carriers for general rate increases extended over the next three years to cover rises in labor costs that are anticipated as a result of labor contracts already signed.

Because the next contract wage increase is scheduled for the spring, regulatory officials anticipate that the association will file a new application for another rate adjustment.

The regulatory agency's calculations were based on an examination of the operations of 11 carriers representing about 80 per cent of the intrastate motor freight volume.

The new rate schedule provides for a permanent schedule of minimum charges of $6.15 and $6.70, according to category, which is equal to the previous minimum and the temporary $1.50 surcharge per shipment that had been authorized by the commission earlier.

For shipments of up to 1,999 pounds, there will be a rate increase of 10 per cent and shipments of over 10,000 pounds will be increased by three per cent.

The over-all increase in revenue for carriers will be about 15.8 per cent, which the commission estimated will yield about 94.9 per cent in operating ratio on the basis of 1969 as a base year. It said this complies with its historic assumption that a 95 per cent ratio of expenses to gross receipts, exclusive of taxes and debt service costs, is a reasonable rate of returns.

St. Norbert Names Three New Trustees

Neenah Residents Chancellor Added To College Board

DE PERE — The Rev. Dennis M. Burke, current chancellor and from 1955-68 president of St. Norbert College, and two lay benefactors, Mr. James Bergstrom of Neenah and her brother, J. Leslie Sensenbrenner of Neenah and Daytona Beach, Fla., have been named to the college's board of trustees.

The appointments increase board size to 25 members and complete for the present an expansion approved Jan. 22. At that time the board voted to increase from a nine-member group to an eventual size of 37 members. Some additional appointments will be made at a future date, the Rev. Jerome Tremel, abbot of the Norbertine Order, said.

The three new trustees have been recipients of honorary degrees from St. Norbert College. Mrs. Bergstrom and Sensenbrenner received honorary LL. D. degrees in 1962. Burke received an honorary LL. D. degree in 1968.

St. Norbert Graduate

A native of Casco, Burke graduated from St. Norbert College in 1926 and he earned post-graduate degrees including a doctorate in sacred theology and a doctorate in canon law while attending the Gregorian University and Angelic Institute in Rome.

Regarded by many as the architect of the modern St. Norbert College, Burke's tenure saw nearly $12 million in new construction completed and the enrollment nearly tripled in size from 621 students to more than 1,700. He has been a member of numerous professional and religious organizations. He is a former president of both the Wisconsin Association of Independent Colleges and Universities and of the Wisconsin Foundation of Independent Colleges.

Mrs. Bergstrom is the widow of business executive James Bergstrom. She attended the School Sisters of Notre Dame and the Academy of Our Lady in Chicago, and she is a graduate of the Chicago Musical College where she majored in voice and piano.

Civic Leader

A noted philanthropist and civic leader, Mrs. Bergstrom was instrumental in organizing the Infant Welfare Circle of The Kings Daughters of Appleton. She is honorary chairman of the board of governors of Mount Mary College, and she has been actjve as a member of the advisory board of St. Elizabeth Hospital in Appleton, and as a member of the board of governors of St. Norbert College.

Sensenbrenner is the retired secretary of Kimberly-Clark Corp. He has also served as head of the Land and insurance department of Kimberly-Clark and for a number of years ran the Kimberly-Clark mill in Niagara Falls, N.Y., where he was active in civic affairs. He attended the University of Wisconsin and the Forest Products Laboratory in Madison. Sensenbrenner maintains a home in Neenah and a winter home in Daytona Beach. He and Colonel John S. Sensenbrenner, Neenah, and Mrs. James Bergstrom and Mrs. George M. Gilbert, also of Neenah, are the sons and daughters of the late Frank J. and Margaret Sensenbrenner, prominent Neenah residents in whose memory the St. Norbert memorial union is named. The Margaret Sensenbrenner Board of Trustees Room is within the Memorial Union. The college also has a Frank J. Sensenbrenner residence hall.

Estimates to Buy Novitiate Doubted

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — A State Department of Transportation analysis of the cost of acquiring and operating the Alexian Brothers Novitiate near Gresham in Shawano County as a state traffic patrol academy is unfairly high, the author of the pending bill to authorize state acquisition of the property says.

The comment came from Rep. Herbert Grover of Shawano, assistant Democrat majority leader in the State Assembly, who said that the department overestimated the probable purchase price as well as the cost of operating the institution for state purposes.

However, Grover said he will not dispute the estimates of $914,000 for purchase, $115,000 for remodeling, and a budget for operations that would include 14 state civil service positions at a payroll outlay of about $170,068 for each two-year state budget.

Confident of Passage

He is confident that he can push the purchase authorization through the Assembly, he said.

The funding would be derived from the state highway fund, and would result in some reductions in highway aids to localities and in the state highway construction budget temporarily.

Grover commented that the structure probably could be acquired at a bid of $750,000, rather than the appraised value of $914,000 cited by the transportation department, and said that the food service personnel assumed by the department would not be required. The patrol could use a catering service from a near-by community after the precedent employed in the accommodation of food service requirements at the existing training school at Camp McCoy, he said.

Snowmobile Explodes Onto Recreation Scene

BY SYLVIA PORTER

As Alla and I stride along on our Sunday hikes in exurbia these winter weekends, we can't miss the spectacular sprouting of one of today's costliest non-necessities of life: the snowmobile. Even in our area, so close to New York City, we see them parked in the driveways, being raced across the fields, being carted by special trailers to snowmobile meets in the state park nearby. It's a dramatic tale of an industry boom during a period of general business recession, a n o t h e r indication that the limit on our desires for luxuries is "limitless." To illustrate:

— Americans are spending from $600 to $1,100 for snowmobiles today, with the average around $1,000 and with some luxury models costing more than $1,500 or nearly the price of a typical compact car.

— Although no hard figures on total ownership are available (only a few states require them to be registered), one estimate is that 1,600,000 are now in operation and "two snowmobile" families are becoming commonplace.

— In the 1969-70 winter, sales in U. S. and Canada totaled 505,000, nearly double 1968-69 and dwarfing the handful sold in the mid - 1960s when this "fun" vehicle first raced across the landscape. Total 1970-71 sales will top $1.2 billion.

—Several hundred different models are now available and more than 100 manufacturers have jumped into the field.

And the machines themselves are only part of the tale, for the array of snowmobile options (as in automobiles) and of clothing accessories to go with the machine is steadily broadening.

A well-dressed "pilot" today might have a lined, insulated snowmobile suit costing $50 to $75, insulated boots costing $20 or so, mitts costing $10, a helmet costing as much as $30, face shields, goggles, etc. In addition, he or she would have tool kits, first aid kits, special sleds to carry extra passengers, trailers to carry the snowmobiles themselves and again, on and on. This season, the estimate is $65 million will be spent for suits and boots alone.

On top of that, the boom has in turn created snowmobile clubs and clubhouses, meets and races, many other sporting ties.

They're coming in for strong, even violent, criticism. They're condemned as a new menace to our landscape, another environmental disaster, threat to ur wildlife. They're denounced as a further invasion of our privacy, danger to our ears, our limbs, our very lives.

Hostility Mounts

In fact, the mounting hostility toward t h e vehicles among property owners and conservationists particularly is resulting in a rash of restrictive laws and regulations to require special safety equipment, prohibit children from operating the machines, ban the vehicles from public roads, railroads tracks, planted areas.

Insurance has become an absolute must and it's not cheap. The typical cost of liability c o v e r a g e under an automobile insurance p o l i c y with limits of $20,000 for a single accident and $10,000 for a single injured accident victim (including the owner's own passengers), plus $5,000 for property damage coverage is about $55 a year.

But the snowmobile is turning out to be a most practical way for telephone linemen, rescue squads, police and firemen, farmers and others to navigate during winter.

It is helping operators of summer resorts to stay open in winter just to sell, service and accommodate the machines and their drivers.

So now the snowmobile joins the camper, the camper trailer, the dune buggy, trail bike, mini bike and all-terrain vehicle, which goes on land or water, in the ever-exploding recreational vehicle market of the U. S. The limit on our willingness to buy non-necessities is indeed limitless.

Universities Note Change In Calendars

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — A precedent set among public universities in Wisconsin by the University of Wisconsin's Green Bay campus, to schedule the first academic semester so that it ends before Christmas, has now been officially noted by all state campuses except the UW Parkside. It will be in effect, beginning in September, on all but four of the state campuses.

The University of Wisconsin Madison campus, Stevens Point State University and Stout State University have considered the revised calendar and have rejected it, but the governing boards for both university systems have recently approved the change for all other campuses.

A faculty committee and students at Madison last fall recommended a change there. But in a presentation to the UW board of regents last week, Chancellor Edwin Young said, "Madison is not ready to bring a complete change at this time."

The chancellor introduced, and the regents approved, a modified Madison calendar that will provide for classes to start a week earlier in September than in recent years. But first semester will continue to extend after Christmas under the plan Young called "transitional."

Although it's termed a transition, Young advised there may be no recommendation for a subsequent transition to the pre-Christmas first semester calendar.

Under the revised calendars adopted by most campuses, classes will begin before or just after Labor Day for the first semester, and exams will be finished two or three days before Christmas. The second semester will begin about two weeks after Christmas.

Green Bay's calendar will continue to be unique as its second semester does not begin until February.

The UW regents approved the early first semester calendar for the Center system at its last meeting and okayed a similar calendar for Milwaukee several months ago.

State Universities Impose Freeze On Hiring, Travel

MADISON (AP)—The Wisconsin state universities system announced today imposition of a freeze on hiring and out-of-state travels by WSU personnel to comply with Gov. Patrick J. Lucey's austerity-in-government plea.

No faculty members or classified civil service employes can be hired without approval of the system's personnel office. Similar approval is needed for out-of-state travel to professional meetings and conventions.

Student athletic teams and music groups are exempt, Eugene R. McPhee, WSU system executive director, said.

Hearing Reset On Theft Charge

A preliminary examination was rescheduled for March 2 for a 55-year-old Glendale man whom Outagamie County investigators h a v e charged with theft.

Dominic Mandella was to have had the hearing Monday before County Judge Gustave J. Keller. Keller reset the matter to allow the district attorney's office time to reply to defense motions previously filed in the case

Investigators c h a r g e that Mandella, as part of a scheme with a former packing supervisor at the Quality Packing House Inc., New London, exchanged cash gifts and merchandise in return for more than 14,000 pounds of meat at reduced, falsified prices. The offenses, they charge, occurred between June of 1969 and Nov. 2 of last year.

Harold Dreier, 44, 1811 Smith St., New London, was placed on two years' probation Jan. 26 for the part authorities said he played in the scheme. Mandella is free after posting $1,500 bond.

Postman Is Charged With Theft of Mail

New London Man Waives Hearing On 19 Counts

A New London mailman has been charged by the U. S. District Court Commissioner in Appleton with the theft of 19 pieces of mail in recent months, some of them which authorities charge contained money.

Robert Herber, 23, route 1, New London, was named in the indictment containing 19 counts Friday, when he appeared for arraignment before U. S. Court Commissioner Patrick Coughlin, of the eastern Wisconsin district. The complaint naming Herber in the thefts was signed by postal inspector Gary Westling of Milwaukee, according to authorities.

Herber waived a preliminary hearing Friday and will appear later in U. S. District Court in Milwaukee, where he was bound over. He is free on a $2,000 signature bond.

Paul Kinney, inspector in charge of the postal inspection service in St. Paul, Minn., said this morning that the thefts occurred over the past few months in the New London area. Information in his office indicates that Herber had been only recently employed by the New London post office, Kinney said.

Kinney said that Herber was taken into custody Friday by Westling and another postal inspector.

Dennis Sexton, New London postmaster, declined comment on the case this morning. Kinney was unable to furnish exact dates and places of the charges naming Herber.

Tax Probes on PX Kickbacks Were Blocked

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senator investigating alleged corruption in military recreational funds says the State Department blocked U.S. tax investigations in Japan for more than three years during the troop buildup in Vietnam.

Sen. Edward J. Gurney, R-Fla., a member of the investigations subcommittee conducting the probe, said the ban prevented Internal Revenue Service agents from studying finances of Americans dealing with U.S. service clubs in Vietnam.

The only exceptions were by special orders, Gurney said. The ban was imposed July 22, 1966, and lifted Oct. 8, 1969.

Gurney said the IRS now has three agents permanently stationed in South Vietnam investigating several hundred tax cases.

Senseless Arrangement

"The fallacy in this senseless arrangement was that an unscrupulous vendor, or vendor's agent, could be in Vietnam, supplying our military forces through the clubs and post exchanges, engaging in kickbacks, bribes, payoffs and other forms of tax evasion," Gurney said.

For all practical purposes, he said, the IRS was forbidden to enter the country and attempt to collect taxes or gather evidence for possible prosecution.

Gurney said the subcommittee has new evidence of corruption in placement of slot machines in U.S. military clubs in Vietnam. His report was written just before the Army announced it is withdrawing the 2,700 slot machines because they are not practical in a war zone.

The investigation is centering on charges kickbacks have been used by civilian vendors in dealing with service facilities operated for U.S. troops around the world.

Military Use

Gurney said there are indications bribes and favors were offered by salesmen to influence the purchase of beer and liquor for military use in Southeast Asia.

The Defense Department says it is investigating alleged irregularities in one such fund on Guam. Senate sources say the probe may be used in subcommittee hearings to illustrate a pattern of corruption in dealings between civilian vendors and service clubs.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., plans to open hearings Wednesday into the handling of nonappropriated military funds generated at the clubs, post exchanges, bowling alleys, slot machines and movie theaters. The funds totaled $6 billion last year.

The hearings are expected to focus on the worldwide Post Exchange system, the military's department store which did about $3 billion in business last year.

Proxmire Wants Vote Against SST

LAKE GENEVA, Wis. (AP) —Congress must be made to vote next month against the SST to demonstrate the value of life over "glamor, international competition and jet-set prestige," Sen. William Proxmire said Monday.

The Wisconsin Democrat, a persistent foe of the costly supersonic jet transport program, said congressional rejection of further government subsidy "would give mankind its first big win over technology" in favor of curing atmospheric pollution.

"Such a vote would mean that this nation's elected representatives were beginning to think about the quality of life with as much intensity as they think about satiating the appetite of the aerospace industry," he said.

Proxmire, addressing a businessmen's meeting, said the SST project should be privately financed, and should be grounded until a panel of scientists is assured environmental quality won't be harmed.

Policeman Risks Life to Remove 'Hippie' Grenade

CHICAGO (AP) — "There I was driving with one hand around this thing and going as fast as I could," said Policeman Ray Walsh Monday describing his predicament after the pin fell out of a hand grenade he had discovered in an elevated train station.

The pin dropped out as he sped towards a lakefront park Sunday, hoping it would be deserted in winter. He made it to the empty park and tossed the grenade, which exploded 10 seconds later.

Walsh found the grenade after a woman said she saw a "hippie type" place something in a station stairwell.

Walsh's commander, James Connolly, said he would recommend the 15-year police veteran for an award.

Shattered by Quake

Dwellings Condemned

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More than 1,000 dwellings have been condemned because of the earthquake in the Los Angeles area a week ago and aftershocks from the quake have further ruffled nerves.

The aftershocks, four of which were felt Monday, caused only minor damage, authorities said.

The latest shocks, from 3.5 to 3.9 magnitude on the Richter scale, were centered in the San Fernando Valley. The quake itself was 6.6 on the scale.

A Monday night tremor knocked out electricity briefly in the Granada Hills suburb. A few residents reported cracked windows and widened fissures in structures but no serious damage.

"We had no reports of serious damage but a lot of people calld wondering if they should evacuate," a police spokesman said.

"After each shock we get a lot of calls. People are worried and that last one shook us pretty good."

Six emergency Red Cross centers were helping evacuees find shelter after they left their homes or apartments in the valley 10 miles north of downtown Los Angeles.

The Van Norman Dam in the north section of the valley continued to hold. It was badly cracked by the big quake, but the water level was lowered to reduce pressure on the dam.

Fifty city building inspectors surveyed damage Monday from the quake that killed 62 persons, injured more than 1,000 and caused damage estimated as high as $1 billion.

Hugh Gillis, who is in charge of Red Cross shelter operations, said the shelters were "one-stop service centers" where families gather before moving in with friends or receiving money for a week's supply of food and motel or hotel bills.

Police warned residents whose homes have yet to be looked over to watch out for persons posing as building inspectors. They said there were reports of imposters charging $15 to $20 fees. The city's inspectors do not charge for the service.

Most dwellings designated as unsafe will have to be demolished, said Harold L. Manley of the city Department of Building and Public Safety.

Prime Interest Dips Fractionally

NEW YORK (AP) — Four big New York banks today cut their prime lending rate by one-quarter percentage point for the fourth time this year.

The reduction to 5¾ per cent from 6 per cent was initiated by Bankers Trust Co. and Chase Manhattan. First National City and Chemical Banks followed.

The cut in the prime rate—the interest banks charge to their biggest and most creditworthy customers—came after the Federal Reserve Board's approval Friday of a reduction to 4¾ per cent from 5 per cent in the discount rate of 11 of the 12 district reserve banks.

Colonel Found Guilty of Seven Marijuana Charges

SAIGON (AP) — A U.S. Air Force colonel with 28 years' service who commanded an airlift squadron was found guilty today of seven marijuana charges. He was sentenced to three years' imprisonment and a fine of $15,000 by a general court-martial of seven colonels and a brigadier general.

Col. Gerald V. Kehrli was acquitted on one count, that he asked a sergeant to obtain marijuana for him last Sept. 15. He was convicted of asking the same sergeant and other enlisted men in his squadron to procure marijuana for him on other datees, of smoking and possessing marijuana and of giving it to men in his unit.

By not dismissing him from the Air Force, the court left Kehrli eligible for pension upon retirement. His length of service makes him eligible to retire now.

The verdict and sentence are subject to automatic review by Gen. Lucius D. Clay Jr., commander of the 7th Air Force, and the Court of Military Review in Washington. Clay ordered the court-martial, and Kehrli's lawyer indicated he would ask the general to delay imprisonment while the review is pending.

The highest-ranking officer court-martialed in Vietnam, Kehrli, 46, was commander of the squadron at the time of the offenses. He could have received 35 years in prison and been dismissed from the service with loss of pay and allowances.

Kehrli showed no emotion as the verdict and later the sentence was read to him in the trial room at Tan Son Nhut air base.

Although he did not testify during the trial, Kehrli took the stand after the verdict was read and asked the board to consider his record in setting his penalty.

"I have dedicated my life to the best of my ability to the Air Force and my country," he said.

Reading calmly and steadily from notes, Kehrli reviewed his school life in Portland, Ore., and his military career. He said he had been a Boy Scout and a member of the 4-H Club.

His family now lives at Willmar, Minn.

Steelworkers Sign With National Can

WASHINGTON (AP) — Breaking a united bargaining front, National Can Co. has signed a contract with the United Steelworkers of America, leaving three other canmakers with a nationwide strike.

Steelworkers, Persident I. W. Abel called the new three-year agreement "an excellent settlement . . . responsive to the needs of membership."

The agreement is the first signed by the union since it moved into major negotiations on behalf of 650,000 workers in the steel, aluminum, copper and can industries.

National, with about 4,000 workers, had been aligned in negotiations with American Can Co., Continental Can Co. and Crown, Cork and Seal Co. The three latter companies said 40,000 of their workers walked off at the 12:01 a.m. Monday strike deadline.

In California, 10 plants were shut down by about 3,300 striking workers. Crown Cork there was not affected, however, as its West Coast facilities have a separate contract.

The union said 16 Chicago area plants were struck, affecting 6,900 workers. Pickets had gone up as soon as the deadline passed at plants around the nation.

The Monday announcement disclosed negotiations actually broke off early Sunday. A statement from the three struck companies said National's signing came as "a complete surprise" and was "on a basis very substantially exceeding the industry offer, as well as other recent industrial wage settlements."

Terms of the Steelworkers' agreement gave the lowest-scale workers a $1-an-hour raise over the contract's three years, with a cost-of-living clause allotting one-cent-an-hour hikes for each four-tenths of 1 per cent boost in the Consumer Price Index, computed quarterly. A yearly cost-of-living guarantee of 12½ per cent and boosts of pension, medicare and medical program payments added to the final package.

The union said the average wage was $3.50 an hour before the new contract was negotiated.

The contract took effect immediately.

Marine Patrol Accused of Shooting GIs

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Globe says a U.S. Marine patrol released five wanted American servicemen, watched them jog out into a small field and then opened fire on them in Vietnam in 1969.

The newspaper based its story on what it said was a stipulation of facts agreed to by prosecution and defense at a court-martial of Marine Pvt. Michael D. Maynard, 21, of Jordan, Utah, in September 1969 at Da Nang.

The report in Monday's editions, said four escapees from the Marine brig at Da Nang and one AWOL Marine were heading towards a wooden house they share with two Vietnamese girls when they ran into the patrol April 29, 1969.

Maynard, now jailed at the Portsmouth, N.H., naval brig, was quoted by the newspaper as saying he and the others were recognized as fugitives and the patrol demanded their weapons.

He said the two groups faced others with weapons ready but the fugitives gave up their guns after the patrol sergeant promised he would let them go, the newspaper's account said.

"So we turned around and took off, not running, you know what I mean, kind of jogging, because you know we thought we were free.

"We got about 20 yards away and they opened up," he was quoted as saying.

The Globe said one man died. The survivors reportedly were court-martialed on mutiny and a variety of other charges.

'Tap It' Game Tests Skill at Identification

BY CAPPY DICK

Easily-arranged games to play at a party are worth knowing about. Today's is a particularly good one because it can be set up in a hurry and the materials required are easy to find around the house.

It's called "Tap It."

You will need a large handkerchief or napkin to be used as a blindfold, a pencil to use as a tapper and a collection of ordinary objects to be placed on a table. Suitable objects — and its a good idea to have 10 or 12 of them — are a drinking glass, a teapot, a fork, a bottle, a book, a vase, a candle, a sea shell, a thread spool, a pair of pliers, a large eraser and a hair brush.

After arranging the objects on a table, blindfold the first player and hand him the pencil with instructions to try to identify as many objects as he can simply by tapping them with the pencil. Keep track of the number he identifies correctly, giving him five points for each. When he believes he has tapped all the objects on the table, even though he has missed some, remove his blindfold. Total his score, then blindfold the next player.

The player who earns the highest score wins the game.

'Sesame Street' Producer, Her Teacher Cited

Golden Key Awards To Mrs. Joan Cooney, Retired Bud Brown

WASHINGTON (AP) — The producer of television's "Sesame Street" and her high school history teacher were named Saturday as recipients of the 1971 Golden Key Awards.

The awards, sponsored by six education organizations, will be persented Feb. 21 to Mrs. Joan Ganz Cooney of New York and Bud F. V. Brown, a retired Arizona teacher.

The sponsoring organizations said the awards symbolize Mrs. Cooney's contribution to the national welfare and "Brown's influence in shaping his former student's career."

Picked Teacher

Mrs. Cooney, once a reporter for the Arizona Republic in Phoenix, is president of the Children's Television Workshop which produces Sesame Street, the popular children's program.

The first woman to be the major recipient of the award in its 15-year history, she chose Brown as the teacher "who changed the course of my life" and "awakened my conscience" and interest in social and political problems.

Brown taught her history at North Phoenix High School when she was 13.

With Sesame Street now broadcast on 300 stations, Mrs. Cooney is working to develop another program in a similar style aimed at children aged 7 to 10 who have reading problems.

Raises Horses

Brown, who retired from teaching in 1950, raises horses at a ranch near Scottsdale, Ariz.

Previous Golden Key Award recipients include the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower, U.N. Undersecretary Ralph J. Bunche, astronaut Water M. Schirra and television newsman David Binkley, along with their favorite teachers.

Jingo Suggests Two Upcoming Programs

St. Norbert Featuring Commissioned Work Friday; Lawrence Comedy Feb. 24 - 27

BY JINGO

Jingo has in mind two promising programs ahead which Fox Valley people should consider attending.

One is the Lawrence University Theatre production Feb. 24 through Feb. 27 in Stansbury

Jingo

Theater and the other is a premiere performance of "The Last Seven Words of Christ" scheduled for Friday night at St. Norbert College.

Baritone Marshall Moss, member of the St. Norbert College music faculty, tenor Darrel Gilow, choral director of Ashwaubenon High School, and bass Patrick Liebergen, senior voice major at St. Norbert, will of Christ."

The work by noted American composer Daniel Pinkham was commissioned by St. Norbert College for this occasion and is dedicated to the school. The 8:15 p.m. concert will be in the Hall of Fine Arts.

Moss, a principal in many Milwaukee and Green Bay area productions, will sing the major part of the Evangelist who narrates the story.

Liebergen will sing the role of first criminal and Gilou will sing the part of the second criminal. The St. Norbert Concert Choir will sing the last words of Christ.

The work also is scored for organ, prepared electronic tape, and brass ensemble.

Recently Completed

Completed Dec. 28 in Cambridge, Mass. the work is the first of a major young American composer to receive a premiere at the College.

During Pinkham's Feb. 14 to 19 campus visit he will lecture and meet informally with students and faculty while he also rehearses soloists, choir and ensemble for the Feb. 19 concert. Tickets are $2 each for adults and $1 for students.

Pinkham is on the campus this week, presenting lectures and meeting informally with students and faculty, besides rehearsing with soloists, choir and ensemble for Friday night's concert.

Mark Malinauskas, assistant professor in drama who joined the Lawrence theater department in September, is directing the Tom Stoppard comedy "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead." The play is being given Wednesday through Saturday nights — Feb. 24 through 27 — as Lawrence University Theatre's second stage production of the season.

Tickets are on sale at the Lawrence box office in the Music-Drama Center.

The comedy is Shakespeare's "Hamlet" seen from the perspective of two of the lesser characters in Shakespeare's tragedy. Sounds like double talk, but it isn't.

Rosencrantz and Guildenstern were the two old friends of Hamlet summoned to Elsinore to find out what is troubling the melancholy prinve.

Playwright's Premise

Stoppard's premise is that, although Rosencrantz and Guilderstern were of little importance in the Hamlet tragedy, they were of very great importance to themselves.

As comedy, the play follows the two companions through the corridors of Elsinore, where they are not only unable to determine what afflicts Hamlet, but hardly able to discern what afflicts themselves.

Haunting Film Honest Look At Life Today

BY TV SCOUT

7:30-9 Channels 11-9 — "Maybe I'll Come Home in the Spring" is a haunting film on Movie of the Week, an honest look at much of what's wrong and much of what's right about today. It was filmed entirely on location with most of the action set in a house in Sherman Oaks, Calif., a pretty portion of the San Fernando Valley. Sally Field is the star as a hippie, grubbing food and making love. Her parents are Jackie Cooper, a decent enough businessman, and Eleanor Parker, a shrewish, hot-tempered wife. Sally finds forgiveness, for they do indeed love her, but there is problem with Lane Bradbury, her younger sister, who thinks the hippie life is a glamorous one. There's tragedy here, mainly brought about by lack of communication. David Carradine plays Sally's former man, whose return precipitates the climax of the story.

6:30-7 Channel 5 — Julia's problem is trying to accept the fact that a computer at school framed and, even though he's a has proclaimed Corey a genius, and she is going to have to do something about it.

7-7:30 Channels 2-7 — Green Acres returns Drobney, that well-mannered duck actor, in a whimsical, funny script. Drobney is so unhappy he takes his security blanket and gypsy record and tries to hitchhike back to Budapest. Lis, that romantic Hungarian, knows what's wrong with her fellow countryman: a lack of romance.

7-8 Channel 5 — The Everglades is another special dealing with man's environment and his attempt to mess it up. This time Hugh Downs is the host and his knowledge of the area covered, which is extensive, helps a lot in making this more than just another show (Arthur Godfrey was in the same location not long ago for another network).

6:30-7:30 Channels 11-9 — The Mod Squad has a good look at the laws which hamper policemen in their duty, while nevertheless protecting the rights of the citizenry. Here Burr De Bennings plays a known narcotics pusher who has gotten off from earlier arrests because of legal technicalities. Nehemiah Bersoff is the policement who is determined to get the man, at any cost. Interestingly, the police finally do get him, then come to believe he has been pusher, they must work for justice — which frees him. One of this series best shows.

3 Student Recitals At Harper This Week

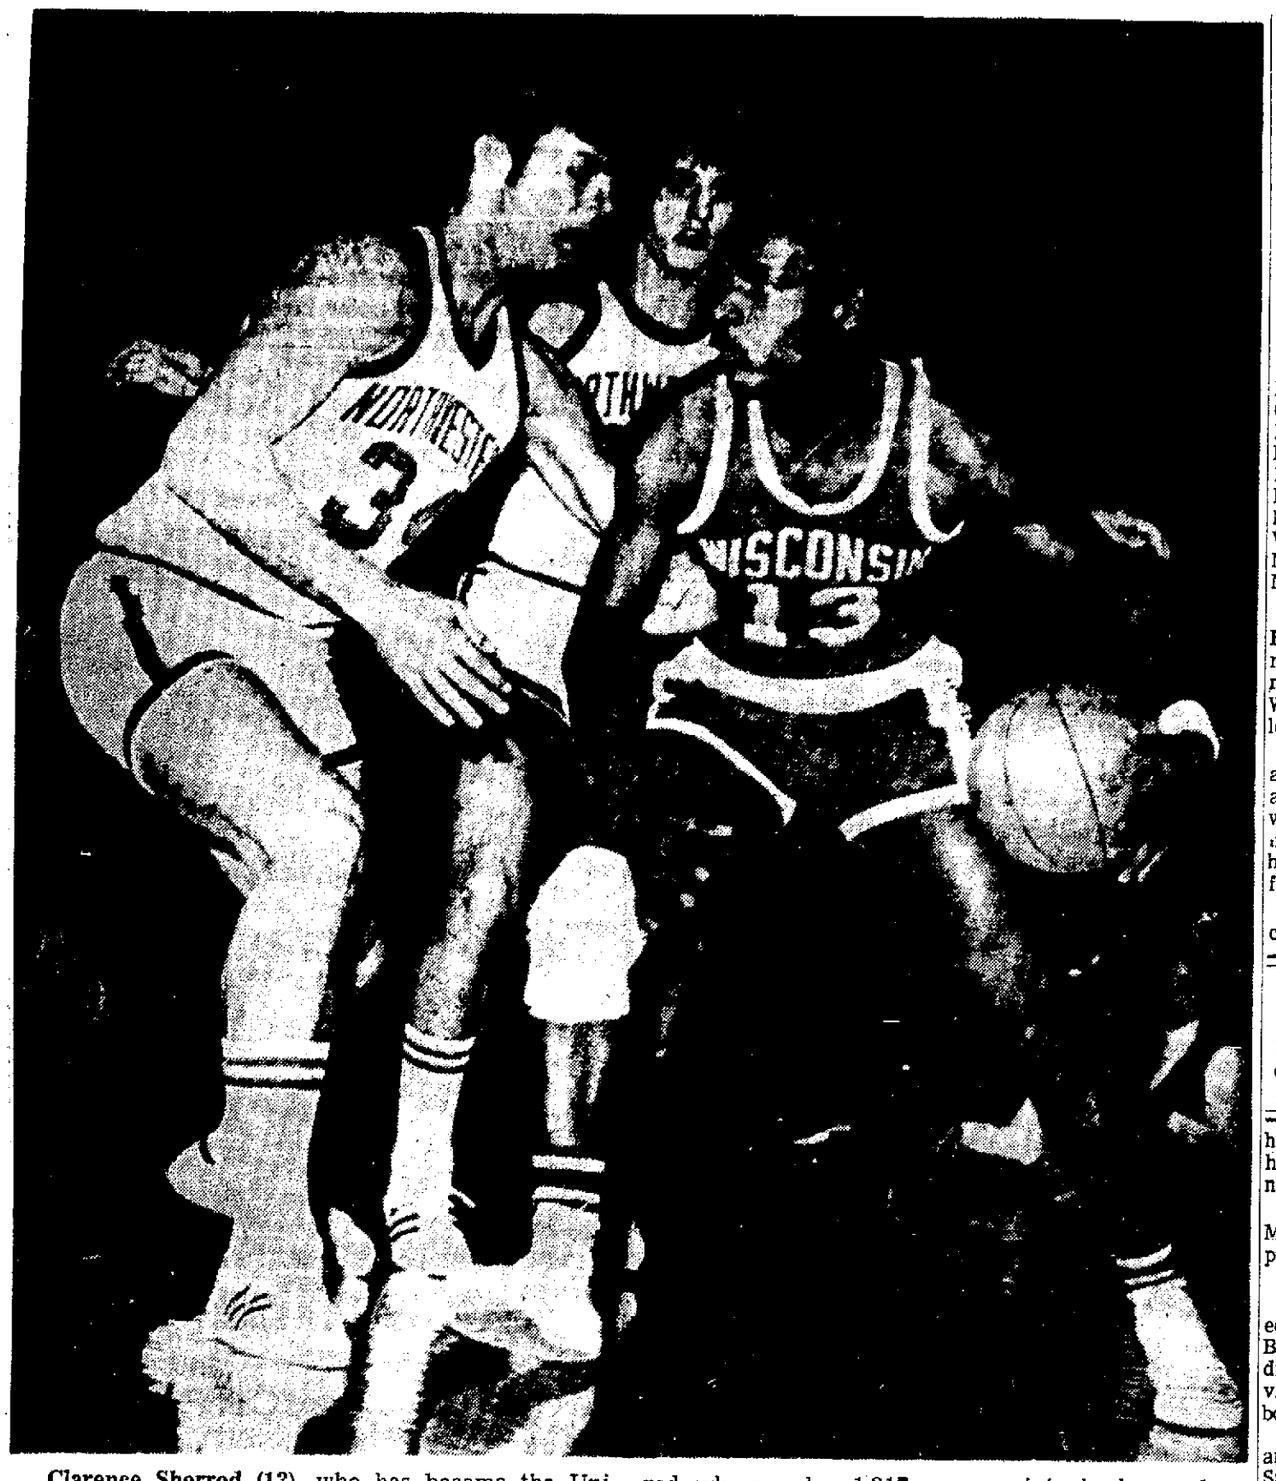
Badgers Bid for Upset Against Ohio State '5'



Clarence Sherrod (13), who has become the University of Wisconsin's all-time leading basketball scorer, will be in action tonight against Ohio State. Sherrod, who now has 1,217 career points, is shown playing against Northwestern last Saturday. No. 34 is Wildcat forward Barry Moran. (AP Wirephoto)

CHICAGO (AP) — Ohio State's Buckeyes, putting on a strong rush in the Big Ten basketball race, face a tough hurdle at Wisconsin tonight while league-leading Michigan rests.

Led by senior Jim Cleamons and sophomores Luke Witte and Allan Hornyak, Ohio State will place its 6-1 record on the line at Wisconsin, a team which has won only once in six conference tilts.

Despite Wisconsin's lowly record and the fact visiting teams hold a 17-16 victory edge over home teams, the Buckeyes cannot take the Badgers lightly.

A second defeat compared to Michigan's 7-0 record could prove disastrous.

Battle for Survival

While Ohio State hopes to edge up on Michigan, two other Big Ten teams—Illinois and Indiana—will be battling for survival. Both have 4-2 records and both will be home tonight.

Illinois entertains Purdue (4-3) and Indiana is host to Michigan State (2-5). Rounding out Tuesday night's schedule will be the Iowa (3-3) at Minnesota (1-6) game.

Michigan will return to action Saturday and the Wolverines will entertain Minnesota and Ohio State is at home against Northwestern.

Indiana will be at Illinois in a continuance of the battle for survival, Wisconsin will be at Michigan State and Purdue is at Iowa in the week's regionally televised matinee.

Game on TV

The Wisconsin-Ohio State basketball game will be telecast by Channel 34, Fond du Lac, at 7:30 p.m. today.

Kansas Wins Nailbiter

Big Men Enjoy Big Night; UCLA Still Leads Marquette

By TOM EMORY
Associated Press Sports Writer

It was fun and games time for two of college basketball's big men Monday night and their teams' victories proved it. But for Kansas, it was a nailbiter down to the last 23 seconds.

Jacksonville's 7-foot-2 Artis Gilmore hit 22 points and had 25 rebounds as the Dolphins defeated Florida State 100-75; and 7-foot Jim McDaniels scored 26 points and grabbed 25 rebounds in Western Kentucky's 83-65 victory over East Tennessee.

Perhaps the teams were relaxed since neither has to face the pressure of being in the top five schools in the latest Associated Press poll. Jacksonville retained its No. 6 slot and the Hilltoppers fell from No. 7 to ninth.

Kansas, however, is the No. 5 team and had to scrap to save a 71-68 decision from Oklahoma.

1. UCLA (15)	18-1	570
2. Marquette (14)	20-0	560
3. Southern California (1)	18-1	494
4. Pennsylvania	20-0	409
5. Kansas (1)	18-1	399
6. Jacksonville	18-2	324
7. South Carolina	14-4	179

20. Ohio State	12-5	15

Also receiving votes, in alphabetical order: Denver; Florida; Houston; Long Beach State; Massachusetts; Memphis State; New Mexico; Oregon; Villanova; Virginia.

The Jayhawks held the fifth spot and added two victories last week but the Sooners put on a tough performance in the first half tying the game 11 times.

Hold On

The Jayhawks trailed 35-33 at halftime, gained the lead at 52-50, then held on for life, victory and their elevated spot in the poll. With 23 seconds remaining, Pierre Russell hit two foul shots to give the winners a 71-66 advantage.

The top four teams in the poll were idle. UCLA retained its No. 1 position, and Marquette, Southern California and Pennsylvania followed in the identical order as last week. The Bruins pulled 15 of 31 first-place votes with Marquette 14, USC and Kansas, 1 each.

In other action among the Top 20 teams, Kentucky, which dropped from No. 8 to 12th place, defeated Georgia 107-95; Tennessee, up from 14 to 13, was upset by Florida 56-55; Notre Dame's Irish, bounced from ninth place to 14th, walloped Valparaiso 100-75; No. 15 Utah State was stunned by Denver 96-74; and Eastern Kentucky edged No. 17 Murray State 82-81.

Late Rally

Florida State staged a late rally against Jacksonville after trailing 48-37 at the half. The Seminoles closed to within 74-73 before Gilmore hit two field goals and two free throws with five minutes left to play.

It was Gilmore's clutch baskets and rebounds that saved the Dolphins but it was junior guard Harold Fox's 16 points in the first half that gave the winners the 11-point halftime advantage. Fox was leading scor-

Baseball Unhappiness

Sam McDowell Wants $100,000; Larry Brown Expects to be Traded

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Pitcher Bill Zepp wants to be traded and infielder Larry Brown is sure he's going to be traded. Both are among a healthy number of unsigned major leaguers who could give baseball general managers a few headaches over the next few weeks.

Zepp, who was born in Detroit, and still lives there, has a problem because he works for Minnesota. He would prefer, of course, to work for Detroit and has suggested as much to both the Twins and Tigers. So far, however, no deal. And Zepp says unless the Tigers and Twins can get together on one, he won't play baseball this summer.

Some of the other holdouts don't come on quite that strongly but they make no secret of their unhappiness with the contract terms the GMs have been offering.

Brown, Cleveland's veteran infielder, wants $34,000—$5,000 more than the Indians are offering. "I'm sure they'll trade me," said Brown, "after all that has happened. All I can do in the meantime is sit and wait."

The Indians also have major numbers problems with pitchers Sam McDowell and Dennis Higgins, outfielder Vada Pinson and catcher Ray Fosse.

McDowell wants $100,000. "I don't want to talk about it much now," he said, "but it sure looks like I'm going to be late. It's up to the club. I'm very anxious to get to Tucson and get ready but I absolutely won't go until the day I sign."

Higgins, resisting a cut from $30,000 after a 4-6 season, said he was offered $15,000 as a sporting goods representative, "and I'll take it before I'll let the Indians cut my pay."

In Baltimore, Dave McNally and Boog Powell, are among the unsigned. McNally, always a tough bargainer, could be shooting for $100,000 after his third straight 20-victory season. Powell's Most Valuable Player Award could earn him close to that amount too.

National League MVP Johnny Bench has been talking about a $500,000 three-year contract but he isn't the only problem the Reds face. Pete Rose is reportedly asking $250,000 for two years and Tony Perez thinks $110,000 sounds very nice. Bobby Tolan, out indefinitely with a torn achilles tendon, says he wants no part of a provisional contract based on how much he can play in 1971, which the Reds have offered him.

Outfielder Billy Williams and pitcher Fergie Jenkins both have let the Chicago Cubs know they'd like to see six figures on their '71 contracts. Jenkins has hired a lawyer to help him with negotiations.

Tony Oliva of the Twins also wants $100,000—about $30,000 more than he earned last year. "I had my best year in 1970," argues Oliva, who turned down Cal Griffith's first offer, "and I think Mr. Griffith should recognize it in my contract."

Boston's Carl Yastrzemski heads a host of unsigned Red Sox players but General Manager Dick O'Connell says "we expect no signing problems." Other Boston players still not signed include Rico Petrocelli, Reggie Smith and Billy Conigliaro.

Yaz says when he signs he'll be baseball's highest paid player. Johnny Bench was unavailable for a comment on that piece of information.

One to go.

A single victory is all that is needed by Neenah's Rockets to wrap up an unbeaten regular season, and appropriately, Coach Ron Einerson's top-ranked cagers will get a chance to notch their prestigious 18th straight triumph before home rooters against Kimberly Friday night.

The Big Red Machine boosted its record to 17-0 last week with road wins over Oshkosh, 74-65, and Kaukauna, 76-56, as Bill Schultz pumped in 25 and 22 points, respectively.

With Rick Matson ill for the battle against the Indians, reserve Steve Loker took over contributing an important 13 points as the Rockets put down a late bid by their hosts.

While Neenah was extending its long string of successes, three more Fox Cities teams were building "mini" win streaks. Appleton East (12-5) copped its third in a row, romping over Waupaca, 74-49, as Dan Kohl scored his season-high of 17 points.

Two in Row

Kimberly (10-7) and Fox Valley Lutheran (9-9) registered their second victories in succession, the Papermakers bumping Menasha, 68-52, and the Foxes getting past University School, 52-47.

Losing skeins were in the news, too, as three more area quintets continued to suffer. Worst off was St. Mary (3-14), which was stung with its eighth straight setback, 73-72, by Premontre in overtime.

Kaukauna's 20-point defeat to Neenah was its seventh in a row in Fox Valley Association play. The Ghosts are 7-10 for the campaign.

Menasha matches St. Mary's log of 3-14 for the year, and five of the Bluejay reversals have now come in succession.

46-Point Effort

In other developments for the week, Tim Moriarty took the individual spotlight as he fired through 46 points in Appleton West's 93-58 trouncing of Oshkosh. The Terrors (13-4) thus enjoyed their biggest offensive outing of the season, beating the previous best of 85 versus Menasha.

Moriarty's total, garnered on 21 baskets and four gift shots, eclipsed the 38-point production of Little Chute's Dick Hackel as the peak single-game effort by a Fox Cities cager for 1970-71. Hackel had his big game against Brillion in the Mustangs' first contest o fthe year.

Other members of the 30-point-or-better club are Xavier's Mark Collar, who hit 34 in his team's 75-70 loss to Crivitz Saturday night: Appleton East's Nick Milhaupt, 33 vs. Oshkosh; Xavier's Tim O'Dell, 32 vs Springs: St. John's Joe Wegand, 31 vs. Roncalli; Little Chute's Steve Mollen, 30 vs. Brillion and 32 vs. Weyauwega, and Neenah's Rick Matson, 30 vs. Appleton East.

Win Streak Broken

Little Chute, now 12-4, had its 4-game winning string snapped by Central Wisconsin Conference champion Bonduel, 72-56, and across town, St. John had a 2-game success story ruined by Marinette Catholic, 70-53.

Xavier, which has been able to win two games in a row only once during the season, dumped Springs Friday night, 73-65, but then fell before Crivitz the following night. The Hawks are 6-12 for the campaign.

Xavier's O'Dell has a slight lead over Little Chute's Mollen, 20.4 to 20.3, for the top average among Fox Cities scorers. Kau-

Rising Costs

Foxes Increase Some 1971 Ticket Prices

Because of the continuing rise in operations costs (the Foxes lost money last year despite setting an attendance record), the Appleton Baseball Club has increased some admission prices for the 1971 season.

Grandstand admission has been increased from $1 to $1.25 per game, and reserved seats will cost $1.50 (instead of $1.25, as in the past), according to Club President Bob Rahn. The price of a book of 10 grandstand tickets has been increased from $7.50 to $10. Student prices have gone up, from 35 cents to 50 cents. Season tickets for children 13 and under will cost $1.50 for 63 home games — instead of $1.

A number of prices will remain the same. For example, a season reserved ticket still costs $35, while senior citizens may purchase season ducats for $15. The bleacher admission remains at 75 cents per game, and a book of 10 bleacher tickets stays at $5. "Family Bleacher" and "Ladies Night" rates remain at $1 and 25 cents, respectively.

The radio broadcast contract has again been awarded to station WLIH-FM, New London.

Concession prices will remain the same, according to Rahn.

Fence Signs

The 1971 advertising campaign is well underway, Business Manager Ed Holtz reports. Fence signs at the park remain at $150 for the season, and the annual scorebook has ads ranging from $300 for a full page to $15 for the smallest ad. The Foxes usually set their advertising sights at $15,000.

Bob Cisna was named chairman of the annual "Welcome Home" banquet, which is set for Thursday, April 22. Willard (Bud) Storch heads up the 8-man book ticket committee. Jim Choudoir has the children's buttons; while Holtz and "Babe" Bayer will also work on passes and ticket printing.

Other committee chairman are: Owen Balliet — insurance; Bud Koehnke — grounds; Bob Kamps — transportation; Holtz-lodging; bookkeeping — S. M. Timmers. Dr. Paul Cunningham will once again serve as the team physician.

Prep Baseball Fund Now Totals $3,584

The Appleton Youth Baseball Association's fund drive for the purpose of starting baseball at Appleton East and West High Schools this spring has raised $3,584.76, it was announced this morning.

The figure is still short of the $4,000 goal, and students from the two schools representing the AYBA will continue a door-to-door campaign until the end of the week in an attempt to raise the balance.

The money from the fund drive and proposals will be presented to the Appleton school board Monday evening at Morgan School.

Sayers Has More Surgery On Left Knee

CHICAGO (AP) — Halfback Gale Sayers of the Chicago Bears of the National Football League underwent further knee surgery Monday and reportedly was resting comfortably.

Sayers' latest surgery was to tighten stretched ligaments on the inner side of his left knee, a problem detected during rehabilitation workouts following surgery last Oct. 21 on the outer side of his left knee.

Dr. Theodore Fox, the Bears' physician said "the injuries were unrelated. The latest surgery was not repair work on the first operation."

Sayers suffered an injury to his right knee and underwent surgery during the 1968 season but came back to lead the NFL in rushing in 1969.

Marquette Students, Brell Want Mascot Thrown Out

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Marquette University's student government, with a basketball star endorsing the action, recommended 16-9 Monday night that the school discard "Willie Wampum" as the symbolic school mascot.

The Student Senate adopted a "degrading and offensive symbol to the American Indians at Marquette."

Gary Brell, member of the school's nationally second-ranked basketball team, was in the audience of 250 students who debated the proposal.

"If Willie Wampum is derogatory, throw him out," Brell said.

A final decision rests with the Roman Catholic university's president. The student decision did not involve the school nickname, the Warriors.

Expert Sees Big Winterkill

Heavy Snowfalls, Pollution to Cause Fish Suffocation

MADISON (AP)— Deep snow on most of Wisconsin's lakes and ponds may bring on a huge fish winterkill this year, a university extension expert claims

Oxygen content of lakes is decreasing rapidly because of heavy snow cover and when oxygen falls below a certain level, the fish "suffocate," wildlife specialist Orrin Rongstad said today.

Snow is a direct cause of falling oxygen content. It prevents sunlight from reaching aquatic plants. Plants, when alive, produce oxygen, but without sunlight the plants die.

Rongstad said heavy snowmobile use contributes to fish winterkill. The heavy machines pack snow, and packed snow may transmit even less light than loose snow

High levels of pollution can make the oxygen supply condition worse, it was noted.

Plowing snow from ice could help but this is usually impractical.

Phil, Tony Battle for NHL Honors

NEW YORK (AP) — Boston's Phil Esposito continues to hold a comfortable edge in the National Hockey League scoring race but his brother, Tony, is in a much tighter battle in the goaltenders' race.

Phil has accumulated 109 scoring points—a fat 18 more than Bruin teammate Bobby Orr, the defending scoring champ.

Meanwhile, brother Tony, who guards Chicago's nets along with Gerry Desjardins, is locked in a tough race with New York goalies Ed Giacomin and Gilles Villemure.

Chicago and New York have each allowed 135 goals in 57 games for a 2 35 goals against average. They share the lead in the Vezina Trophy race for fewest goals allowed by a team—a race Esposito and the Hawks won last year

The individual goaltending leader remains Toronto's Jacques Plante, who has given up 64 goals in 33 games, a 1 99 average. Tony Esposito is the shutout leader with five—one more than Giacomin and Villemure with four apiece.

A showdown battle for the Olympian Conference title looms Friday when Freedom invades league-leading Valders.

The Irish (10-2) must get by cellar-dweller Wrightstown (1-11) in a make-up contest tonight. Also slated to play tonight are Reedsville (6-6) at Denmark (4-8) and Mishicot (7-5) at Hilbert (3-9).

Friday's slate includes Reedsville at Hilbert, Mishicot at Brillion (7-6) and Wrightstown at Denmark.

Valders' (12-1) only defeat of the season came seven games ago at the hands of the Irish, 63-62. Since that game Freedom's offense has picked up, and the team has missed scoring over 80 points once in five outings.

Top Scorer

Stopping the Irish won't be an easy task for the Vikings. Freedom has the league's top scorer in Joe Vandenberg and three of the top five. Vandenberg is averaging 21 8 a game, Bob Garvey 16.3 and Tony Brockman 15. Gary Hooyman gives the Irish a fourth scoring threat with an 11.3 mark.

Freedom is tossing 75.8 points a game through the nets, while yielding 62 9. Currently, the Irish sport a 9- game winning streak against league foes

Valders plays a stingy defensive game, allowing just 48.5 a game, while tallying 62 7. Ken Larson, currently ranked third, is the Viking's leading scorer with a 16 5 average. Lou Rusch, 6-3, is second at 13 5 and Jim Pivonka is adding 11 4.

Assert Selves

Since its loss to Freedom, Valders has narrowly averted defeat at the hands of Mishicot, 57-56, and last Saturday edged Reedsville, 55-51

Larson dropped 21 and Rusch 14 in the first confrontation, but Vandenberg dominated by tossing in 30. Brockman, Garvey and Hooyman have been asserting themselves more in the second half of the season.

A losing streak will have to end tonight when Reedsville and Denmark clash. The Panthers have dropped out of contention with three consecutive losses, while Denmark is in a 5-game tailspin. In the first meeting, Reedsville dealt the Vikings a 70-62 loss.

Jeff Barnard had an erratic start for Reedsville but in the second half has come on to pick up the scoring pace. He has 24, 23 and 20 point games in the last five.

Lane Nixed Major Deal

Brewers Official Felt Cost Too High; Likes Young Players

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Brewers' player director says his American League talent hunters had a chance to acquire Wisconsin native Rick Reichardt, but decided to stick with some of the talent at hand.

Frank Lane said Monday the Washington Senators' owner, Bob Short, offered him four players in return for Brewer outfielders Dave May and Danny Walton.

"Short offered me Reichardt, Mike Epstein, outfielder Ed Stroud and a little catcher named Jim French," Lane said.

Milwaukee would rather have May and Walton, Lane said, adding that Walton's power-hitting tendencies indicate he is a future hero.

"I'm not belittling Reichardt," Lane said. The former University of Wisconsin sports star, traded recently to the White Sox, "is a high-class guy, but we don't think we need him."

Lane also said he had offers from Detroit and Kansas City for Mike Hegan, "but I'll bet Hegan this season hits .275 or better."

Colts' Mike Curtis Irked by Criticism of 'Super' Win

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Mike Curtis, middle linebacker of the Baltimore Colts, indicated Monday night critical remarks made about his team's Super Bowl victory last month rubbed him the wrong way.

The Colts "didn't crush or run over people" as they won the American Football Conference title and then the big prize, Curtis said, "but we were consistent.

"We beat teams when we had to beat them."

Curtis spoke at the annual awards banquet of the Kansas City Chiefs' Committee of 101, which honored him as AFC defensive player of the year.

Others receiving awards were quarterback John Brodie of the San Francisco 49ers, selected by sportswriters and broadcasters as the NFC offensive player of the year; tackle Alan Page of the Minnesota Vikings, NFC defensive player of the year; quarterback George Blanda of the Oakland Raiders, AFC offensive player of the year; linebacker Chuck Howley of the Dallas Cowboys, most valuable player of the Super Bowl; Coach Dick Nolan of the 49ers, NFC coach of the year and Paul Brown of the Cincinnati Bengals, top vote-getter among AFC coaches.

Blanda, Brown and Howley did not attend the dinner.

JIM MURRAY

Meriwether Proves He's For Real

There is a cliche in journalism, one of the hoariest in the business, which goes, "If they made it into a movie, no one would believe it."

In 30 years in this game, I've seen mostly stories which, if they made them into a movie, no one would sit through them.

But I must admit, in some respects, the Delano Meriwether story is as improbable as "Son of Flubber." In fact, the first time I heard of it, I thought someone was describing Part One of Disneyland.

The script goes like this:

Act I, Scene 1: Dr. Delano Meriwether is a mildmannered hematologist at the Baltimore Cancer Research Center. He lives a quiet life with his wife and infant daughter. All the drama in his life is condensed in the viewing prism of his microscope and scanning equipment, where he probes for the cause, presence and cure of blood diseases, ranging from the malignancy of leukemia to the treatable anemia or mononucleosis. He is the first black ever to be admitted and graduated from Duke University Medical School.

Act I, Scene 2: The neighbors notice Dr. Meriwether begins to act strangely. He comes home at night still in his hospital whites running BACKWARDS up seven flights of stairs. "What kind of a doctor is he — a psychiatrist?" they wonder. Perhaps, he's trying to grow a living brain in a fish tank in his apartment. At night, he makes mysterious trips carrying a small plastic bag. The neighbors know he doesn't make house calls except for hospital rounds.

Act I, Scene 3: Myrtle Meriwether confronts her husband. What is going on? Dr. Meriwether goes over to the television set, flips it on. There is a track meet in process. The best sprinters in the world, young men in their prime of their blinding speed who have trained all their lives under skilled coaches. They are running 6-flat 60s, 9.1 hundreds. "Look at them, I can beat them," says Dr. Meriwether.

Myrtle Meriwether feels her husband's brow for fever. He is 27 years old, he is an M.D. He has never run track in his life. He played volleyball, bridge and the saxophone in college. "Why," asks Mrs. Meriwether, "don't you go out and play golf like all the other doctors." Her husband insists. "Why, I could make the Olympics!" he marvels. "Why not the Green Bay Packers?" his wife asks sarcastically, looking at his 6-foot 3-inch, 145-pound frame.

Act II, Scene 1: The scene is a track meet. The world indoor record holder is in Lane Two. The AAU sprint champion is in Lane Three. But what's this in Lane Six? Surely this arrived by airborne flivver. It's wearing swimming trunks, over-large shoes, a white, V-necked hospital intern's skivvy shirt, the kind they scrub up in before the nurse puts the smock on and — SUSPENDERS! It's a joke. Halfway down the track, an American flag will pop out of a top hat which will pop on his head, a rabbit will fall out of his trunks, and he will stop running and whip up a chorus of "When The Saints Go Marching In."

Takes The Lead

Act II, Scene 2: Halfway down the track, he takes the lead. All the way down the track, he still has it. Dr. Meriwether has defeated the flower of America sprinters in the College Park Invitational Meet.

Act II, Scene 3: Establishing shot shows Dr. Meriwether flying — at his own expense — to the Sunkist Meet in Los Angeles. Meet officials are still not sure this isn't part of some elaborate practical joke and they don't advance expense money. It isn't a joke. The runner representing the AMA comes within a whisker of beating the fleet Madagascar flyer, Jean Louis Ravelomantsoa. He runs a 6.1. A montage now shows him winning CYO sprints, running second twice to undefeated Jim Green in the Mill rose games, and the K. of C. It shows him winning the sprint at Boston.

Kosco Approves Brewers Contract

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Power hitter Andy Kosco was among two more players signed Monday by the Milwaukee Brewers, bringing to 29 the number under contract, the American League club said.

Kosco, 29, acquired in a trade from Los Angeles, and third-baseman Bill McNulty were the signers. McNulty was in the American Association last season, hitting 22 home runs and batting .295.

Stellar Pitcher, Showman

Paige's Skills Unclouded

By MIKE RATHET

NEW YORK (AP) — When Leroy "Satchel" Paige threw his last hesitation pitch in the major leagues he was, by his own estimates, 59 years old. He was by some other estimates already qualified for social security.

Either way, Paige had established that he was a pitching marvel, able to hurl in the major leagues with the Kansas City A's in 1965 at an age when few men leave their rocking chairs, let alone try to put a pitch past a 20-year-old hitter.

How did Paige manage it? The tall, lean pitcher always quoted his six rules on "How To Stay Young" whenever he was asked. The six rules were:

—Avoid fried meats which angry up the blood.

—If your stomach disputes you, lie down and pacify it with cool thoughts.

Juices Flowing

—Keep the juices flowing by jangling around gently as you move.

—Go very light on the vices, such as carrying on in society. The social rumble ain't restful.

—Avoid running at all times.

—Don't look back. Something might be gaining on you.

How much Paige lived by those rules is open to question, since so much of his life and achievements are hidden in the long ago era when the Negro baseball leagues flourished or have been so embellished by time as to make it difficult to separate fact from fiction.

But there comes down to us by various methods enough of a picture to underscore the reason why Paige was selected as the first black star of the pre-1947 era to be selected for inclusion into the Hall of Fame

Pitcher Showman

For the 6-foot-3½, 180-pounder was both a remarkable pitcher and showman, unquestionably the biggest name ever to come out of the black leagues that, after the color line was lifted in the majors, spawned such stars as Jackie Robinson, Roy Campanella and Larry Doby.

From 1926 until 1948 when he joined the Cleveland Indians, Paige toiled in the Negro Leagues for about 250 teams—most of them on a one-day basis.

Advertised as "Satchel Paige, World's Greatest Pitcher, guaranteed to strike out the first nine men," he appeared in a uniform with either "Satchel" or "Paige" across his shirt for any team that could pay him the $500 to $2,000 he commanded for pitching three innings.

As often as not, legend tells us, nine men would go down swinging. According to the best available records, he several times struck out as many as 22 men in a nine-inning game, including one against major league barnstormers in 1930.

It was while pitching against such barnstormers, including stars of the magnitude of Dizzy Dean, Joe DiMaggio, Jimmy Foxx and Hank Greenberg, that he was able to prove that his pitching ability equalled that of the white stars.

Paige always believed that—and more.

Pitching against Dizzy Dean on one barnstorming trip, the teams went into the 10th inning tied 0-0. As he went out to pitch, meeting Dean coming off the mound, Paige drawled:

Stay All Night

"I don't know what you're going to do, Mr. Dean, but I'm not going to give up any runs if we have to stay here all night."

He didn't, and won it when his team scored a run off Dean in the 13th.

"If me and Satch was on the same team," Dean said afterward, "we'd win 60 games between us."

"Maybe," said Paige, "I'd win all 60 by myself."

Paige won with an awkward pitching motion in which he gyrated his legs in various positions and cranked his arm up over his head while throwing from different angles with unbelievable control. He had a wide assortment of pitches, including the famous hesitation pitch in which he stopped in mid-throw before firing toward the plate.

That array was still good enough to get him into the majors in 1948 when he was 42 years old—the oldest rookie in big league history. He left behind the Negro leagues and, by best estimates, some 2,500 games—of which he said he won about 2,000, including some 100 no-hitters. He brought with him to the majors his reputation and an arm he personally kept fit.

No Sore Arm

Paige insists he never had a sore arm and kept it lubricated with olive oil while baking it in hour-long steam baths if it got stiff. He generally traveled with a wide variety of drug store items, including bicarbonate of soda and goat's milk for a balky stomach.

And he pitched on and off in the majors until 1965 when at age 59—or older, depending on whose word you take for it—he threw his last pitch for the A's.

His actual age continues to be something of a mystery, which Paige has steadfastly refused to clear up. And even Tuesday, on so auspicious an occasion as his selection to the Hall, he sidestepped the issue, pointing to dates that left his age anywhere from 63 to 65.

"I really can't hold it in one place," Paige explained without in the least becoming flustered. "Besides, that's pretty close—just like it's always been."

And probably always will be. For not only his age—but Satchel Paige himself always will be partly shrouded in mystery.

Chile Plans to Stop Illegal Land Takeover

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Promising "drastic, profound, rapid and massive agrarian reform," Interior Minister Jose Toha says Chile's leftist government is preparing legislation to punish peasants who take over farms on their own.

Toha, speaking on national television Friday, said President Salvador Allende has sent to Congress a bill setting penalties for "instigators and executors of land takeovers." The nature of the penalties was not disclosed.

Allende, a Marxist, has promised to expropriate all large rural estates in Chile, while leaving small farms and ranches in private ownership.

But occupation of many small and large properties by peasants has become one of the most troublesome problems he has faced since taking office in November.

Many land takeovers have been led by leftist political agitators, despite official pleas for an end to such practices.

Toha said persons who continue to defy authority to "create a climate of intranquility and take advantage of an image of disorder and anarchy are in fact conspiring against the Chilean revolution."

He said the government has not used "repressive action" to halt illegal occupations because of its confidence in Chile's rural workers.

"But this attitude cannot be confused with weakness or complaisance," he said.

Toha warned that the government "will proceed drastically" against the illegal land seizures, adding that they "do nothing but retard and make more difficult the execution of agrarian reform."

Law No Longer Isolated: White

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Law is no longer accepted by lawyers or others as irrefutable pronouncements from on high," says Associate Justice Bryon White of the U.S. Supreme Court.

For that reason, he said Friday, lawyers "can no longer view their profession in isolation. Science, economics and the behavioral disciplines become major determinants in the lawyer's work."

White spoke at dedication ceremonies for the Elvon and Mabel Musick Law Building at the University of Southern California.

U.S. Threatens More N. Vietnam Bombing

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. Command today announced the loss of five aircraft in South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, and an increase in small-unit fighting in South Vietnam. The toll was 22 Americans killed, 22 wounded and one missing, the Command said.

U.S. military officials also warned there may be more American air strikes against surface-to-air missile—SAM—sites inside North Vietnam to protect B52 bombers flying raids against the Ho Chi Minh trail just inside Laos. The warning came after attacks Sunday and Monday on SAM sites.

Farther south along the trail through the Laotian panhandle, there were indications that the 11,800 South Vietnanese troops trying to cut the network on the ground were bogging down due to stiffening enemy resistance, heavy antiaircraft fire and poor weather limiting U.S. air support.

Advanced Column

South Vietnamese headquarters in Saigon said the most advanced column of troops had pushed about 14 miles westward into Laos at last report Monday after eight days. But Lt. Gen. Hoang Xuan Lam, commander of the operation, said some reconnaissance troops were at Sephone, a key North Vietnamese transshipment point 25 miles west of the border.

The U.S. aircraft losses announced today included:

—A big CH47 Chinook helicopter and an F4 Phantom fighter-bomber in the Laotian panhandle. The helicopter was shot down with five crewmen killed and a sixth missing. It was supporting the South Vietnamese troops. The Phantom, attacking the enemy supply trail, crashed due to unknown causes, and the two crewmen were recovered in good condition.

—An Army UH1 helicopter shot down in northeastern Cambodia, with one crewman wounded.

Crashed in Vietnam

—Two other helicopters crashed in South Vietnam with seven Americans killed.

The U.S. Command said 10 other Americans were killed and 21 were wounded in half a dozen enemy attacks, three of them against units of the 9,000-man U.S. force in the northwest corner of South Vietnam acting as a blocking force for the South Vietnamese in Laos.

The command said 7,487 US.. planes and helicopters have been lost in Indochina since Jan. 1, 1961. This includes about 500 in Laos and 57 in Cambodia.

The command also reported that 15 U.S. helicopters have been shot down and destroyed in the Laotian operation since it began Feb. 8, with a total of 19 Americans killed, three missing and 16 wounded.

Nine of these choppers went down in Laos, with 11 Americans killed, three missing and eight wounded. The other six crashed on the Vietnamese side of the border with eight Americans killed and eight wounded.

Sources said about 15 other U.S. helicopters have been shot down in the Laotian operation but were recovered. Casualty figures in these crashes were not available.

The U.S. Command said American helicopters have flown 5,600 missions into Laos in the past eight days. These missions include gunship attacks, resupply, medical evacuation, command and control and troop lifts. About 10 South Vietnamese helicopters are flying resupply missions compared to the hundreds of American aircraft.

Name, Rank, Number

Tippler's Treaty

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Dean F. Goulee was told Monday by a traffic court judge that he cannot employ articles of the Geneva Convention as defense against Wisconsin's implied consent statute.

Goulee, 43, charged with driving a car while under the influence of alcohol and with refusing to submit to a chemical test to determine intoxication, told Judge Louis J.Ceci the statute violates his rights.

"No man is required to give testimony against himself," the motorist argued. "Even a prisoner of war has to give nothing but his name, rank and serial number."

"That," Ceci commented, "is because they have the Geneva Convention. If you had signed the treaty with the United States, that might be a valid argument."

Ceci fined Goulee $150 and gave him a five-day jail sentence.

Three Lawmen Slain in Dallas

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A widespread alarm was out today for a 33-year-old ex convict accused of fatally shooting three of five kidnaped deputy sheriffs. One of the surviving deputies was wounded.

The deputies, seized while investigating a burglary, were taken to a river bottom where their captors opened fire.

Issuing a description of the fugitive, Sheriff Clarence Jones of Dallas County said, "It would be an understatement to say we want him bad."

Charged with murder, he was identified as Rene Adolpho Guzman. Authorities said he had a police record for burglary and assault.

Others Questioned

Four other men were being questioned, but Jones said, "The trigger man is the one we want."

Shot to death in a fusillade of revolver fire in the Trinity River bottoms were Dallas County deputies William D. Reese, 30, and Sam Infante, 32, and Ellis County Deputy A. J. Robertson, 59, of Waxahachie.

Deputy Wendell Dover, 49, of Ellis County was shot in the chest. His condition was described as fair.

The sheriff said Guzman had been charged in the killing of Reese and formal charges in the other slayings would be filed later.

A. D McCurley, 50, the only one of the kidnaped deputies who escaped death or wounding, said the incident began when Infante, Robertson and Dover went to a West Dallas home to question some men about a burglary.

They telephoned the Dallas County sheriff's office, asking for a blank form to be used in connection with a search for the stolen property.

Reese and McCurley answered the call. They knocked on the door and a voice inside said: "Come in."

Holding Gun

McCurley gave this account of the house and found the three other officers tied up in chairs with two men holding guns on them. McCurley and Reese also were tied up.

A third man entered the room and began to talk in Spanish with the other two. The third man made a negative motion indicating he wanted nothing to do with what was going to happen and left the house.

The five officers were ordered into a squad car by the two remaining men, who put Infante at the wheel.

Lucey Promises Pressure for Peace

MADISON (AP) — Gov. Patrick J. Lucey promised a veterans for peace group Monday he will "continue to keep pressure on the federal establishment" in an attempt to help end the Vietnam War.

Lucey termed the war "the most compelling problem we face today."

He said he would have no reluctance to sign legislation which would make it unlawful for a citizen of Wisconsin to be forced to fight in an undeclared war outside the United States.

Noting that the U.S. Supreme Court failed to uphold a similar law passed last year by the state of Massachusetts, Lucey said language of a Wisconsin law should be such that it would be "an effective instrument" for applying pressure on the federal government to stop the war.

Massachusetts Law

Three Democrats last week submitted legislation similar to the Massachusetts law in both houses of the Wisconsin Legislature.

Lucey told veterans he had received no response to a telegram he sent last week asking President Nixon to explain U.S. military involvement in Laos.

"I am really surprised at how readily the American public was able to sit back and accept Laos," he said.

The meeting with the veterans was held in the governor's cabinet room in the Capitol's east wing.

Lucey said he generally agreed with the veterans contentions that the Nixon administration appeared to have expanded the conflict with action in Cambodia and Laos.

Revulsion of Americans

"It's time to talk about the revulsion of the American people to the war," said Christopher Kasten of Madison, a member of the group.

"The people at the highest levels must begin talking angrily," Kasten said. 'It's absurd to talk in terms of symbolic gestures."

Lucey said he felt the United States' posture on the war was "more reprehensible" now than it was several years ago.

"The government permits the carnage to go on so long as their conscience is salved by a reduction in the kill ratio," the governor said.

Lucey noted that Wisconsin's budget for the next two years will be about $2 billion.

At the same time, he said, the same (Wisconsin) taxpayers will hand over $3 billion to (Deefnse Secretary) Mel Laird to run the Pentagon. It just doesn't make sense."

Lucey said he thought governors could bring pressure to bear on the federal government because "they can command a considerable degree of media coverage and it might have a telling impact."

He said he would attempt to convince other Democratic governors to exert such pressure at a meeting in Washington later this month.

Richard Larson of Madison, one of the veterans, asked Lucey what the group might do to help end the war if legislation against the war is again held unconstitutional.

"We've knocked on about every door," Larson said. "If this fails, what could you recommend?

"Dramatize your position short of violence," Lucey responded. "If your tactics are such that you alienate like-minded citizens, you defeat your purpose."

War Documents Revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Franklin D. Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill overruled a World War II suggestion by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower that Italy be given peace with honor in return for surrender, secret wartime documents have disclosed.

The documents, made public by the State Department Monday, also show:

—Roosevelt was sharply critical of French Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

—The United States suggested Britain cut its tank production and order more American tanks.

—U.S. Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson accused the British of being only lukewarm on the planned D-Day invasion of Europe across the English Channel.

The documents show Eisenhower, then commander in chief of Allied Forces, proposed before the allied landing that Italy be promised a peace with honor should she surrender. He made the proposal in a May 17, 1943, letter to the combined chiefs of staff.

Roosevelt and Churchill disagreed, however, and sent a telegram to Eisenhower saying, "Most certainly we cannot tell the Italians that if they cease hostilities they will have a peace with honor. We cannot get away from unconditional surrender."

Letter to Churchill

The documents also contain a letter from Roosevelt to Churchill written May 8, 1943, saying, "I do not know what to do with de Gaulle. Possibly you would like to make him governor of Madagascar."

Roosevelt's letter also accused de Gaulle, later to become president of France, of stirring up trouble in Algiers.

On the issue of tanks, W. Averell Harriman, Roosevelt's personal representative, wrote Churchill that unless the British bought American tanks, "thousands of men will be thrown out of work . . . and politically it will be difficult for the President to explain . . ."

Stimson's letter to Roosevelt, dated Aug. 10, 1943, said of the British support of the D-Day invasion: "Though they have rendered lip service to the operation, their hearts are not with it."

Kidnaped Airman Released in Turkey

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — A Texas airman kidnaped and held 17 hours by suspected leftist extremists was undergoing questioning today by U.S. Air Force investigators while Turkish police hunted the kidnapers.

Sgt. Jimmy Ray Finley, 24, an air policeman from Fort Worth, Tex., walked back to his base Monday night, apparently none the worse for his experience.

The Air Force gave no details of what he reported. But speculation in Ankara was that the kidnaping might have been the work of a group of leftists wanted for two recent bank robberies in the city.

The five-man gang is led by

former Istanbul University law student Deniz Gezmis and has been at large since its first successful bank raid Jan. 11.

Officials would say only that Finley's abductors were believed to be leftist extremists, active for the past year in terrorist attacks against American servicemen and their families.

Turkish police said at least three men took part in the kidnaping about 3 a.m. Monday at an American installation on the outskirts of Ankara.

The kidnapers entered the base apparently undetected and forced Finley into a truck while he was on guard duty. A few hours later the pickup truck was found empty and abandoned, its motor still running and with a flat tire 10 miles outside Ankara.

The kidnaping jolted the American community in Turkey.

"It's been building up to this," said a U.S. diplomat of the spreading wave of anti-American violence in Turkey. There have been bomb attacks against U.S. installations and Americans have been roughed up, insulted and threatened.

Turkish police have reinforced Turkish troops guarding U.S. installations. Americans were not allowed to carry weapons for guard duty. Turkish police also are stationed at the residence of the U.S. ambassador.

Anti-Americanism first appeared in 1964 when many Turks resented the lack of U.S. support in their dispute with Greece over Cyprus. It has intensified with the growth of extremism in Turkish universities in the past two years.

Stans, Penn Central Link Investigation Suggested

WASHINGTON (AP) — A member of the Senate Commerce Committee has called for immediate hearings into Secretary of Commerce Maurice H. Stan's interest in a major Penn Central subsidiary and his role in government efforts to shore up the failing railroad.

Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., urged convening of the committee "at the earliest possible date to hear Secretary Stans' explanation of matters which on their face seem to indicate a strong possibility of impropriety."

Hartke is third-ranking Democrat on the committee which approved Stans' cabinet appointment in January 1969.

Hartke commented in a statement following disclosures by The Associated Press that Stans owned $318,000 worth of stock in Great Southwest Corp. on June 12, 1970, at the time his department was involved in administration plans to grant Penn Central $200 million in federal loan guarantees.

The railroad, which owns 90 per cent of Great Southwest, filed for reorganization under the bankruptcy act after the administration decided against the loan guarantees.

"The facts of the matter appear to be these," Hartke said. "At the time of his confirmation hearings Mr. Stans held either personaliy or in partnership approximately 38,000 shares of stock in Great Southwest . . . but he did not reveal these holdings in a financial statement he submitted to the committee."

At the same time, Hartke said, "Mr. Stans assured us that he would put all of his holdings into a so-called blind trust—that is, a trust the transactions and value of which he would have no knowledge.

"Apparently, however, that blind trust had eyes, for Secretary Stans revealed, no doubt inadvertently, to an Associated Press reporter knowledge of transactions that occurred nine months later," Hartke said.

The senator noted the value of Stans' investment in Great Southwest had gone from $570,000 in January 1969 to $318,000 in June 1970 and now—if he still holds the shares—to about $114,000.

It could not be learned whether Stans still has an interest in Great Southwest, a Texas real estate firm.

The Remains of a car in which a motorist died Monday when struck by a passenger train are examined by curious pedestrians Monday in Oak Creek, a suburb of Milwaukee. The car's engine was carried by the locomotive about a mile beyond the crossing. The victim, William J. Feely, 48, of St. Francis, was the sixth person reported dead in a state car-train accident within the week. (AP Wirephoto)

Agnew's Performance Wins Approval in Poll

Percentage Same as Year Ago; Rating With Administrative Leaders Still a Question

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

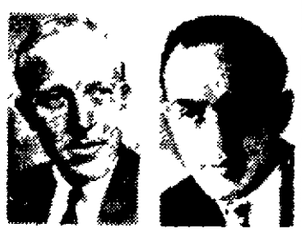
WASHINGTON — Although Vice President Spiro T Agnew's stock has been slipping badly within upper reaches of the Nixon administration, private soundings by pollster Oliver Quayle show him maintaining a remarkable steady — but low — level of public esteem in sharp contrast to President Nixon's decline

Indeed, previously unpublished Quayle surveys for statewide candidates across the country reveal a public attitude toward Agnew that greatly differs from assumptions of the President's closest political advisers It shows, first, that Agnew has never been a popular as they thought, and second, that he therefore hasn't fallen back as much as they feared

Extremely important these days is the fishy eye now being cast in his direction by politicians close to Mr Nixon. Whereas a few months ago they viewed Agnew as an unquestioned asset certain to be on the 1972 ticket, some presidential intimates are now having second thoughts and regard him as only a 50-50 shot for the ticket. The Quayle findings put the question in new perspective

51 Per Cent Approve

A compilation of his interviews with 10,425 people in 23



Evans

states for the year ending Feb 1, 1971, shows that only 51 per cent approve Agnew's performance as vice president — dangerously low for an incumbent But Agnew's rating was an identical 51 per cent in Quayle's polling for the 12-month period ending March 1, 1970 In short, despite all the public controversy about him, Agnew has remained at precisely that level

In contrast, Quayle's year-long average show Mr Nixon's impressive 58 per cent rating on March 1, 1970, slipping to 57 per cent on Aug 1 and falling to 53 per cent for the year ending Nov 1 Since then, the President has levelled off at 53 per cent

Beneath the surface impression of steadiness for the vice president, however, Quayles' data reveals on Agnew decline The percentage of voters who consider his job performance "poor" has increased from 18 in the year ending March 1, 1970, to 23 in the year ending Feb 1, 1971 That nearly one-in-four "poor" rating is unusually high for an official with an overall favorable rating of 51 per cent

By comparison, President Nixon gets a "poor" grade from only 15 per cent On the other hand, the vice president is rated "excellent" by 17 per cent compared with only 12 per cent for the President

That tends to confirm the view of many Nixon strategists that voters polarize around Agnew, either very plus or very minus. Therein lies the White House problem concerning Agnew and 1972

Presidential aides, worried about sending congress a comprehensive tax-reform package in a presidential election year, are now toying with the idea of a bipartisan presidential commission to draft the reform, thus paving the way for greater acceptability in congress and the country

President Nixon used just such an approach when he named a commission on governmental reorganization, headed by industrialist Roy Ash, to pave the way for his sweeping reorganization program.

For several weeks, presidential aides have been dropping hints that Mr. Nixon's "new American revolution" will move on to tax reform next year However, they fear that, if drafted in normal fashion at the treasury, an election-year tax package would die in the House Ways and Means Committee

But if an ash-type commission, working under presidential guidelines, put its prestige behind the reform, it might stand a better chance Even if it did not, its backing by a prestigious commission might enhance Mr Nixon's chance of taking another reform issue to the country in his reelection campaign

A footnote· Any tax reform would surely propose a value-added tax — a tax on business transactions similar to a national sales tax — in exchange for lowered personal and corporate income tax rates Congressional Democrats, including Ways and Means Chairman Wilbur Mills, would attack this as a Republican scheme to shift the tax burden from big corporations to little taxpayers

Snowmobile Passenger Gets Damages

Man Awarded $874 In First Such Suit in Outagamie County

A snowmobile passenger who was injured when the machine struck a barbed wire fence was awarded $874.80 in damages last week.

The damage suit apparently is Outagamie County's first involving the negligent use of a snowmobile.

William Van Den Bogard, 30, of 3203 N. Ballard Road, the plaintiff, asked $26,500 in medical and other damages from the defendant, James Murphy, 27, of 2606 Heather Ave., in the jury trial.

The 12-member jury found Murphy, operator of the machine, 60 per cent negligent and Van Den Bogard, his passenger, 40 per cent negligent. Trial was held before County Judge Raymond P. Dohr in County Court Branch 3.

Murphy was operating the snowmobile the night of Feb. 8, 1969, with Van Den Bogard as passenger, the complaint said, when the machine struck a barbed wire fence in a field between State 125 and U. S. 10, near the Elm Tree Bakery.

Van Den Bogard, the complaint said, was knocked unconscious, and suffered a brain concussion and fractures to bones in the cheek and nose. According to the complaint, he was hospitalized for two days and suffers severe headaches as a result.

Murphy, Van Den Bogard complained, was negligent because he went too fast for conditions and failed to maintain a proper lookout.

In his answer, Murphy said that at the time of the accident, he traveled 15 miles per hour and failed to see the fence, although his headlamp was operating.

Lucey Won't Create New Task Force on Education

Study Now Would Duplicate Kellett Report

MADISON — Gov. Patrick Lucey has changed his mind about creating a task force on education because he feels it would duplicate the recently completed work of the William R. Kellett educational task force.

He had announced plans for the educational task force, along with study groups on other issues, several weeks ago. The Kellett task force, appointed by then-Gov. Warren P. Knowles, completed its study in November.

"The governor was going to create an educational task force and he announced it sort of ad lib," a Lucey spokesman said. "However, when he looked the situation over, he realized that the Kellett task force has been working a long time on many substantial changes in education."

Lucey endorses a number of the Kellett proposals, he said, but he could not disclose which ones at this time. There are indications that Lucey will outline his endorsements in his March budget message.

Recommendations

The governor's spokesman said that Lucey felt "it would be redundant to have another education task force study," at least at this time. He admitted that possibly another task force would be created in the future, especially if the State Legislature rejects certain Kellett recommendations to be introduced by Lucey.

It's conceivable he would create a new one for recommendations for legislation for the 1972 legislature, the spokesman said.

He said that Lucey had conferred with Kellett, a retired Neenah industrialist and chairman of the Kellett task force, "a couple of times" during the past three weeks. This probably affected the governor's decision, he said.

The spokesman said that Lucey wasn't giving a blanket endorsement of the Kellett report. He and his staff have studied it quite closely.

The governor has a strong desire to include citizen input into his legislative program, and the task forces, created several weeks ago, would allow this bipartisan involvement. These 71-day task forces are to come up with recommendations for immediate conversion to legislation.

The governor's office wouldn't comment on whether Lucey is ready to go along with a Kellett suggestion that the University of Wisconsin system and the nine-school state universities system be consolidated. There has been speculation that his thoughts on this will be in his budget message.

UW Regent Ody J. Fish, chairman of a special study committee, said last week that his committee's work should be postponed until after the budget is presented.

The task forces named by Lucey hit various state problems, ranging from agriculture to industry. The education panel was to attention itself to education at all levels.

Brillion Teacher Threatens Suit

BY DIRK VAN SUSTEREN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

BRILLION — School officials remained tightlipped Monday over the suspension of Frank Boyle, a controversial, 25-year-old English teacher at the high school.

But Boyle today threatened a suit to retain his job. He said he was in contact with a representative of the American Civil Liberties Union.

The school board, which met for two hours Saturday with Boyle, scheduled another meeting today, after which Boyle's status was to be announced.

Boyle, who had been with the school only three weeks, came under fire last week for what one member of the school board termed his "methods and ideas of teaching."

Brillion students responded Friday to his rumored suspension by calling a sitdown strike in the school gymnasium at the start of school. Supt. of Schools Gaylord Unbehaun noted that the sitdown lasted only 15 minutes and that the move was initiated by a small number of students.

William Hertel, Chilton, attorney for the school board, said today that he had met with a Madison lawyer who was representing Boyle. Unbehaun's situation Monday was "no comment," the same as it had been over the weekend.

In a statement today, Boyle said:

"Saturday the board had asked me for my resignation. At the meeting I explained to them my philosophy of education, which contrasted to theirs."

"I could probably quit, but they would have to pay out my contract."

"Yesterday I went back to Brillion and called together 12 students; we took a vote, and decided to fight. We contacted the American Civil Liberties Union in Green Bay, and saw . . . a lawyer who will work

Beauty Shop Owner

Hilbert Chamber Honors Retiring Mrs. Robert Luck

HILBERT — Mrs. Robert Luck, owner of the Hilbert Beauty Shop for 28 years, was honored at a testimonial dinner Saturday by the Chamber of Commerce at the 49'er Steak House on the occasion of her retirement.

Leonard Suttner, long-time editor of The Hilbert Favorite, said that he probably had known Mrs. Luck and her family longer than anyone attending the affair and described them all as "hard working and honorable people."

Suttner said he remembered when Mrs. Luck purchased the beauty shop in Hilbert after owning a similar business in Milwaukee for many years. "There were those who said she'd have a hard time making a go of it, as some of the previous owners had had a tough time".

In noting her success in the village Suttner described her as a "hard working, accommodating and smiling person having clients from a wide area." He wished her successor, Mrs. James Brantmeier the same kind of success.

Orville Manz, chairman of the affair, introduced relatives and guests and said Mrs. Luck always could be counted on to support Chamber of Commerce activities. She was a member of the organization.

Speaker for the evening was Mrs. Mabel McClanahan, Appleton, past president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs.

Mrs. McClanahan's theme was "Give Me Tomorrow" in which she stressed that "the only way it's going to be better is if we make it better." She spoke of retirement not as a door closing, but as another one opening and time to think of rededication.

Mrs. McClanahan noted the accomplishments made to society by women who had dedicated themselves to community service, and pointed out that today's youth were very little different from those of years ago. The speaker urged her audience to demonstrate and then delegate duties to youth and those taking over leadership. "Show them, then let go; how can you expect to reach something better if you're hanging on tight to the past?"

Evelyn Ecker, first vice president of the Wisconsin Federation of BPW gave the invocation and a short congratulatory message.

Correspondence was read from Mrs. Rueben Laack, past president of the Calumet Area BPW of which Mrs. Luck is a member, and from Gaylord Unbehaun, chairman of the Calumet County Day Care Service Board on which Mrs. Luck serves.

Notebooks in recognition of the testimonial were given by the State Bank. Howard Sielaff was in charge of decorations.

Mrs. Luck thanked the Chamber of Commerce for the party, which had been kept a secret for weeks, said:

"If I were to thank all the kind people who have done things for me since I came to Hilbert, I would be here for hours.". She remarked that "these have been the best 28 years of my life."

Others serving on the committee with Manz were Mrs. Howard Sielaff, Mrs. Ambrose Suttner, Mrs. Ernest Pitzen, Mrs. Eugene Pethan, Leonard Suttner, Don Gast and Ernest Pitzen.

Union Hearing Gets Postponed

A hearing scheduled for Monday on a request by Appleton school crossing guards for a representational election to determine whether they pull out of the Teamsters Union, has been indefinitely postponed.

Douglas Knudson, hearing examiner for the Wisconsin Employment Relations Commission, who was to have conducted the hearing, said a conflict in schedules of a Teamsters attorney made the postponement necessary.

He said a date early in March is likely to be set for the hearing.

The crossing guards have been represented for some time by Teamsters Local 563.

Fire Destroys Chilton House Monday Night

CHILTON — A two-story home owned by Clarence Geiser, route 2, was destroyed by fire Monday evening. No estimate of damage was reported, as Peter Penn, who rents the home, could not be located by authorities.

The home is located one and one-half miles north of here on the Short Road behind the rendering plant. According to Alex Schoenung, assistant fire chief, the blaze apparently started in a west bedroom and spread through the walls.

The fire was reported by Paul Anhalt, who noticed smoke coming from the home while snowmobiling in the area. The Chilton Fire Department answered the call with two trucks and remained on the scene for two hours.

Auto Burns on U.S. 41 Sunday

A Kimberly man escaped unharmed Sunday night when fire destroyed his 1970 automobile on U. S. 41, just south of Pine Street in the Town of Grand Chute.

John Van Dalen, 39, 121½ Kimberly Ave., told Outagamie County police he was headed north on 41 when he smelled smoke. He stopped and checked, but finding nothing, drove on for another five miles. He stopped the auto again when a flame shot out from under the front seat.

The Town of Grand Chute Fire Department extinguished the fire.

Man Dies Of Injuries From Fall

KAUKAUNA — A rural Hilbert man died early today of injuries sustained about 12 hours earlier in a fall off the steel roof of a barn under construction near here.

He was Merlin Ott, 57, route 2, Hilbert, an employe of Keller Structures Inc., route 3.

Ott, according to Outagamie County police, was working atop the roof of a machine shed on the Ronald Thyssen farm, when he lost footing, slid backwards and fell about 12 feet to the ground. Police said he flew backwards and struck his head.

Ott was taken to Kaukauna Community Hospital by ambulance about 5:30 p.m., but later transferred to Theda Clark Hospital for brain surgery. He died at Theda Clark at 4:30 a.m. today of accident related injuries, according to Calumet County Coroner Leroy Hughes.

Ott reportedly sustained a skull fracture in the fall. The Thyssen farm is located north of U. S. 41 on the French Road.

Regional Group Discussed

Creation of Plans Agency Is Chore of Local Officials

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH — Some of the fog which has enveloped the future of regional planning in the area was lifted Monday at an informational gathering of state agencies' representatives and county and municipal officials.

State representatives explained how a new areawide planning organization might be formed to satisfy state and federal requirements, but they made it clear that it's up to local officials — not the state — to take the initiative, unless Gov. Patrick Lucey indicates differently.

Secondly, it was emphasized that locally elected officials — county, city, town and village — must ponder the alternatives and make the decision — not residents, planning commissioners or planners.

The meeting was called by Oshkosh Common Council President Byron Murken to poll interest in forming a new regional planning agency covering the eight counties in the Lake Winnebago administrative district for state services.

'Special Interests'

"It's up to the elected officials in the counties to decide if they want this," Murken said. He earlier had noted concern about "special interests" which were trying to control the decision.

The problem facing officials is that the region is served by two planning agencies — Northeastern Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission and the Fox Valley Council of Governments (COG) — and soon must form a new planning agency and new boundaries to maintain area counties' and communities' eligibility for federal funds.

There have been other attempts at a solution, including merger talks between Northeastern and COG, but Murken and state officials indicated that local officials must pick up the ball. Murken proposed a meeting next week of the eight-county region's top municipal and county officials to "kick this thing around."

The lengthy session Monday included explanations of state and federal goals in planning, a review of what has occurred in the formation of the administrative districts for state services and multi-county regional planning agencies, and questions about the effects of the districts on future planning.

Essential for Funds

Charles Hill, secretary of the State Department of Local Affairs and Development, said that multi-county regional planning is essential for an area to get federal aids and grants.

Asked later how critical the need for a new agency with no planning overlap is, he said: "Without an areawide plan, the counties stand to lose a great deal in federal aid. The communities could just be cut off basic capital improvements grants."

He said he didn't know if the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, a major federal granting agency, would extend the July 1 deadline.

He declined to predict if the state would take a stronger hand in the absence of local action. He said he first would have to talk with Lucey. He noted earlier, however, that he suspected the new governor would "like to see some kind of compatable arrangement with the administrative districts."

Out of Business?

Despite assurances by Hill and others that Northeastern, which has only four of its nine counties in the Lake Winnebago district, won't necessarily be put out of business, Gordon Bubolz, chairman of the non-metropolitan regional planning agency, defended the "tremend-

The Candidates for Executive . . . II

Roemer Wants More Services Handled by the County

BY CLIFF MILLER
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Ald. Robert Roemer, one of the 12 candidates for election as the first Outagamie County executive, is basing his bid on proposals to elevate several public services from the local municipal to the county level.

Each of Roemer's proposals has been discussed at one time or another. Some still are under serious consideration. Several are controversial.

The 60-year-old former Appleton mayor said the county ought to provide property assessment, health, welfare, police, waste disposal, fire protection, library and planning services now either provided only by local governing units or administered in sometimes overlapping fashion by both local and county government.

He said he doesn't believe all the changes should come about at once, but county officials should begin thinking about all of them now.

"These are just ideas, and some of them should be done at the present time," he said. A county fire department, for instance, might be impractical in the near future. But police, welfare, health and library services could be lifted to the county level now, he believes. And state legislation drawn from the Tarr Task Force report makes a county assessor possible, he said.

He considers the county assessor the most important on the list.

Untrained Assessors

At present, each community in the county has its own elected assessor. Roemer said "and a lot of them are not trained to do this thing the way it should be done."

If the county took up its option recently granted by the state to appoint an assessor and equipped him with a staff of trained professional assistants, "everybody would be assessed on the same basis," Roemer said.

"I believe this would have an effect on the taxes and would take some of the burden from the now overburdened property tax," he said.

County police and fire services have been studied by the Fox Valley Council of Governments, he noted. Providing full-time service in communities now receiving volunteer services for fire protection might be one advantage, he said.

Robert Roemer

Waste disposal also falls logically in the county's domain, in Roemer's opinion. "Everybody has to get rid of waste," he said.

The county is currently considering library services. Roemer said more services would be available for all county residents if the county, rather than a few of its larger communities, was in charge of the library.

He also said that all county communities would be better off if planning were performed at the county level.

While he said he isn't sure whether the county should entirely take over the present Appleton planning department, the two certainly should be dovetailed.

Roemer, executive secretary of the Wisconsin Concrete Paving Association, was an alderman six years, then was elected mayor and served 12 years. He has served another four years as alderman since leaving the mayor's office.

Currently president of the City Council, he was a city representative on the defunct City-County Safety Building Committee, and favored building the joint facility immediately east of the present courthouse on Jones Park.

He sees the newly created county executive's job as one requiring diplomacy and a knack for public relations.

"The first county executive is going to have to move very carefully," he said, expecting the County Board to be suspicious at first.

He will have to go to the board and seek its cooperation. "That's the secret of the whole thing — cooperation," he said. "If he wants to get things done, he's got to get along with the County Board."

On the other hand, he said the law spells out clearly enough of the responsibilities of each. One is the legislative branch, the other the executive, he said.

One reason the new job was created was to give identity to county government. Roemer said one way the new executive can accomplish that end is through his responsibility as ceremonial head of the county. As a mayor represents the city at public events, the executive should be present for the county, he said.

Many of Roemer's proposals have been suggested by Appleton officials but rejected or ignored by the county.

Asked how he would work to smooth city-county relations, he said, "Talk to these people, get their ideas, try to get them to think more county-wide, instead of their own provincial thinking."

Waupaca Riverside

Hospital Auxiliary Helps Health Careers

WAUPACA — The Women's Auxiliary of Riverside Memorial Hospital is offering scholarships to area students interested in health careers.

Applications must be submitted to the guidance director of the school from which the student is to be graduated on or before May 1, 1971.

There will be two nursing school scholarships offered this year and assistance will be given to students interested in other health careers, such as physical therapy and medical technology. The addition of assistance for students interested in health careers other than nursing is a new part of the program this year.

"The number of students in other health areas will determine the financial assistance we will be able to give," explained Miss Frances Magdanz, chairman of the scholarship committee. Other committee members are Mrs. Wendell McHenry and Mrs. Clifford Johnson, Waupaca, and Mrs. George Kennedy, Weyauwega.

Students eligible for scholarships will receive $100 for the first year, with increases of $100 for each subsequent year, and a four-year student may receive as much as $1,000.

To be eligible for a first-year scholarship in nursing the student must be a high school graduate, 17 years old or older, must have passed the nursing aptitude test, must meet academic requirements of a chosen school of nursing and must have taken the required prenursing examination.

Interested students from Weyauwega, Manawa, Amherst and Waupaca high schools are eligible to apply for financial aid under the scholarship program.

In 1970 two students were awarded scholarships to nursing school, and the auxiliary is presently aiding a fourth-year nursing school student.

Calumet Patrol Tries Lights

CHILTON — Calumet County traffic police are experimenting with a new emergency light called a "Twin Sonic" beam.

The light consists of two beams which revolve on each end of the unit and reflect off of two mirrors making a sequence of lights as they flash. According to patrolman using the lights this past week, they give a much better warning of their approach and cars readily pulled over.

The single beams or flasher that are used on all the Calumet County cars just give a swirling light effect and are not readily seen at a distance.

Although no separate cost figures were given for the light attachments which are easily mounted to the top of the cars, it would cost about $1000 to equip the eight county cars.

No action to purchase the units have been authorized by the committee on protection persons and property which is responsible for traffic department purchases.

O'Connor's Pharmacy team is in first place with a 36-12 record followed by Town and Country Shop and Calumet County Bank teams, tied with 33-15 records.

Committee OKs Plow Attachment, Council Vote Due

Giving in to continuing pressure, the Streets and Sanitation Committee recommended Monday that Appleton try out an attachment to keep graders from plowing driveways full of snow.

The decision, which goes to the City Council Wednesday, came on a 3-2 vote. The committee chairman, Ald. Norman Beyer (20th), broke a tie to swing the decision in favor of the purchase.

Ald. George Reynolds (7th) explained the resolution he put before the council two weeks ago and which was sent to the committee after an attempt to win immediate council approval seemed headed for a defeat.

The committee reversed two previous actions against the proposal, which Public Works Director Robert Miller has viewed skeptically.

Hold Back Snow

The attachment act as gates at the outer edge of the grader plow blade, dropping to hold back snow as the grader passes a driveway.

Appleton does most of its snow plowing with trucks pushing front-mounted plows, rather than graders. Miller said that as a result the gates are of little value unless the city buys more graders, which he said would be useless in the summer while trucks can work year-round.

Reynolds, a candidate for re-election in April, cited a municipal affairs magazine article that reported Spokane, Wash., uses the gates with considerable success. Spokane also does its plowing with graders, using a number of second-hand machines in its fleet.

Reynolds said he isn't recommending that Appleton purchase a fleet of graders, though he said Spokane claimed its operation saved money. "If buying graders will save the City of Appleton money when it comes to plowing snow, maybe we'd better give it two looks," he added.

$600 Attachment

He also argued that while the $600 cost of buying one of the attachments isn't in the public works budget, the finance office reports that that sum can be found somewhere.

Miller reported that efforts to find a similar attachment for a truck-mounted plow have been unsuccessful so far. Several local manufacturing firms have been asked if they would be interested in designing such a device, but they backed away because of possible patent infringements, Miller reported.

His comments were in response to Reynolds' reference in his resolution to the truck-mounted equipment search which is "supposedly being conducted."

Reynolds said he used the phrase because at the time he wrote the resolution, investigation showed nothing had been done. He said he is grateful for the effort Miller has made since then.

Aldermen Orville Strutz (17th) and Al Stoegbauer (4th) voted in favor of the test purchase, and Aldermen Judith Winzenz (12th) and Richard Schouten (19th) were opposed, with Beyer breaking the tie.

The proposal still faces a major council hurdle, with the votes of six of the 20 aldermen all that is needed to defeat it once again. An unbudgeted expenditure requires a three-fourths majority to pass.

ous accomplishments" of the agency and said the northern counties contributed an important part to the total effort. Some area agency serving the mid-Fox Valley.

Bubolz emphasized the importance of protecting the environment, which he said Northeastern had done, and offered to step aside as head of the agency or a new agency in favor of a county board chairman — an elected official. Bubolz and other Northeastern commissioners are appointed by the governor.

Murken chastized Bubolz for promoting his own commission at what was an information meeting and question-and-answer period.

"It appears that we have a lack of communication," he said. He then noted Bubolz's remarks criticizing bureaucratic decision superseding the people's say, adding that the Bubolz presentation was "a beautiful example of someone trying to protect his own bureaucracy."

He praised Eugene E. Franchett, COG executive director, for honoring the purpose of the meeting.

One Criterion

To a Northeastern commissioner's question, Craig Adams, of the State Department of Administration's planning bureau, said that the watershed is only one criterion and not an over-riding factor. Economic, social and other factors also must be considered when establishing regional planning agency boundaries, he said.

Alvin Karetske, director of local and regional planning under Hill, said that in the southwestern part of Wisconsin, there was a strong county-level control of the planning. He suggested that this could be a model approach for multi-county planning throughout Wisconsin.

James Kennedy, associate administrator of St. Agnes Hospital, Fond du Lac, said that in a regional health planning agency, there must be 51 per cent consumer representation.

He said also that the agency must certify need for items, and "this we feel will be a very important aspect" because it will allow local control of the construction and health care delivery costs.

Miss Freda Zuehlke, a native of Fremont, has retired from the teaching and counseling profession and returned to her home where she plans to spend much time enjoying visitors, gardening and restoring antique furniture. She was the first female principal in the Fremont School system. The high school then offered a two-year curriculum. (Schmidt Photo)

Fremont Teacher Retires

They Were 44 Very Interesting Years

BY VIRGINIA SCHMIDT
Post-Crescent Correspondent

FREMONT — "I don't know what I could have done for the past 44 years that would have had as much interest for me," said Miss Freda Zuehlke of her career in the teaching and counseling profession upon her retirement.

Returning here to live in the family home after her retirement, Miss Zuehlke reflected back on the young people she had dealt with during her career. "Almost all of the youth of every generation came through all right," she said.

She speaks from experience because a major part of her career was spent in the guidance and counseling profession, particularly in the Brookfield school system.

She was head of the guidance departments in the Milwaukee suburb since the Brookfield High School opened in 1955. She was honored recently for her dedicated service to high school youth at a tea by the Elmbrook Board of Education in Brookfield.

The suburb grew from about 600 students in 1955 to over 5,000 students with two high schools and two junior high schools. Brookfield Central and Brookfield East consolidated with Elmbrook and Miss Zuehlke, area director of guidance, became chairman of the staff of 16 counselors. She also did student counseling from her Brookfield Center office.

Her admiration of a high school English teacher was the impetus for her career. She graduated from a three-year course at Oshkosh Normal, later returned there to continue her education and studied also at the University of Wisconsin, Madison; Columbia University, New York City; the University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee; and Carroll College, Waukesha.

She acquired a Bachelor of Science degree in education and plans now a master degree in guidance and clinical practice.

Miss Zuehlke was affiliated with Gamma Sigma, Phi Beta Sigma and Delta Kappa Gamma.

She began her career as an English teacher at Alma Center High School, then taught at Plainfield. She then became the first female principal of the Fremont school system when it boasted a two-year curriculum. During those years from 1936 to 1944, she also taught subjects in grades nine and 10 as well as music and dramatics.

She next began duties in Mayville as a high school English teacher. During the later part of her years there, she was a guidance counselor for all students. At Edgerton High School she was in charge of guidance counselling and reading supervision.

She expresses "strong faith" in the youth of today. This is qualified by her Brookfield experiences where courseling was three fold — educational, social and emotional.

With practically no vacation during those 44 years, she expresses no regret. But now she plans to catch up on old friendships and start some new ones. There also will be time for gardening and restoring antique furniture.

Appleton Girl May Avoid Rabies Shots

An Appleton girl apparently will not have to undergo a series of anti-rabies shots. The large white cat that bit her and then disappeared over the weekend was identified by her Sunday night.

Susan Kuehnl, 12, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Kuehnl, 120 E. Hancock St., identified the pet cat which police traced to a north side home. Police had been notified Saturday afternoon that the girl was bitten on the left hand by a stray cat near her home Feb. 7.

The girl was taken to a clinic Saturday after her left hand and arm began to swell.

The cat was taken to an animal hospital and examined, and is being held for 10 days' observation. Authorities said the animal showed no external signs of being rabid.

Police extend their appreciation to many citizens who offered information during the search for the animal.

He spent "a few months" in the Marines and got an honorable discharge for medical reasons.

He said he ran for the State Assembly on the Democratic ticket in Price, Rusk and Sawyer counties, and lost by 2 per cent of the vote.

No Discipline Problems

One student who supported Boyle and participated in the sitdown strike said he liked Boyle because "he didn't put himself on a higher level than us. We could call him by his first name. He really understood, and he was the only teacher we felt we could talk to.

He said Boyle never had discipline problems because whenever he said something, "there was a reason behind it."

Another student said he though Boyle ran into trouble 'because we discussed things like communes, the draft and the U. S Constitution.

"Everything we put in our school newspaper is censored by the administration, and he helped us think about starting our own."

One student said he heard Boyle had ordered the books, "The Godfather," "The Population Bomb" and "Black Like Me," for the English class and that he thought the administration disapproved. The student said that one teacher called these books "bunk."

Regarding the sit-in demonstration, one student said, "People think Boyle called in the television, but it was us; we heard he was fired, so a bunch of us called the press thinking it might help us."

The student explained that many students supporting Boyle, including student council members and athletes.

Deductibles and co-insurance charges to be paid by patients under Medicare have increased. For example, in 1971 the hospital inpatient deductible for the first 60 days of benefits has increased from $52 to $60 for each hospital stay.

The annual premium for Medicare-Extended coverage is just $61.20. That's only $1.20 more than the $60.00 deductible you would have to pay for each hospital stay without Medicare-Extended coverage. Medicare-Extended . . . an outstanding bargain in freedom from worry.

The Campaign in Laos

President Nixon, in his decision on Laos, agreed with the military view that one way to halt any major aggressive move by North Vietnam would be to cut the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Southern Laos and destroy carefully piled up supplies. The President even went along with the military's request for a news blackout so the campaign could be launched in secrecy, although the impending campaign was publicized fully in the press of other nations, and was leaked to some sources in this country. (See column by Joseph Kraft on this page.)

From a military point of view, the Laotian invasion is a rational move. If intelligence is correct, the destruction of vast quantities of supplies for the reported 120,000 to 150,000 North Vietnamese troops in Southern Laos and Cambodia could put off any major attack and give the United States added time to prepare the South Vietnamese to take over the major defense of their country. The Nixon Administration has assured the public that no American ground combat troops will be used in Laos, although the definition of such troops gets a little hazy at times. The government was apparently honest in its declaration that full American air support of the invasion would be available.

Advocates of the move point out that the former major gateway for the introduction of North Vietnamese supplies was the port of Sihanoukville, now under the control of the Lon Nol government or what was his government before he suffered a stroke recently. Since that port was closed, they say, the rate of supplies being brought down the Ho Chi Minh Trail increased dramatically during the dry season.

But those who oppose the strong United States backing for the move into Laos ask what will the United States do if the South Vietnamese should suffer a major defeat in Laos. Could we afford to shrug and be bound by the pledge not to send in our ground combat forces? How many American lives will be saved along the DMZ if the North Vietnamese do attack there in strength?

Vice President Ky has also raised the possibility of a South Vietnamese invasion of North Vietnam across the DMZ, which would spread South Vietnamese troops thinner. The decision to bring back the United States Marines to ward against a possible North Vietnamese thrust across the DMZ seemed an acknowledgement that South Vietnam is not yet ready to do the job of defending its borders without American ground combat assistance.

President Nixon has pledged to bring more troops home in the spring and has said that by midsummer only 40,000 to 50,000 American ground combat troops will be left in Vietnam. However, his definition of such troops does not include a similar number of "security" forces which will stay to protect American installations and which, according to Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird, won't just be standing around watching fences 24 hours a day. Perhaps the Laotian adventure will give the South Vietnamese increased confidence and assure more safety for those Americans left in Vietnam.

Perhaps. But we've heard predictions of confidence and optimism so often in the last four years of this unfortunate war that it is difficult to accept them with full encouragement.

Agnew's New Weapon

It's getting to be that a major status symbol in the United States is either getting called some euphonious epithet by Vice President Spiro Agnew or being beaned by one of his golf drives.

Mr. Agnew has been quiet since the setback of Republican political ambitions by the November election results. His silence may have been sought by political strategists while they studied out the election results and the whys and wherefores and girded for the next big one less than two years away. But when he played golf at Palm Springs in company with some rather famous golfers, the Vice President twice sent drives from the first tee into the crowd, hitting three spectators, one of whom was taken to the hospital for X-rays. Mr. Agnew gave up on that first tee and went off in a golf cart to the next where there were not so many people within range.

Interestingly enough the Vice President was sent to California to inspect the disaster area around Los Angeles created by the massive earthquake last week. Apparently he almost extended that disaster area to Palm Springs.

Pause in Memory of Bill W.

Last Sunday, Alcoholics Anonymous members, estimated at 475,000 throughout the world, including several hundred in the Fox Valley area, each in his and her own way paused in special memory for the late William Griffith Wilson.

Known to them as "Bill W.," cofounder of the AA fellowship which gave them sobriety, a path back to the land of the living, a way of life, their hearts were be filled with gratitude for his example and a new pledge to carry the simple, workable program to the millions of sufferers from alcoholism who still do not know there is a way out of the jungle.

Wilson died Jan. 24 at the Miami Heart Institute, Miami Beach, Fla., as a result of pneumonia. He was 75 years old.

Upon his death his AA anonymity was broken. He had granted that permission in a signed statement in 1966.

In fathering the doctrine that members should not reveal their AA affiliation at the public level, faithfully since the fellowship was formed in 1935, "Bill" explained anonymity in these words: "Anonymity isn't just something to save us from alcoholic shame and stigma; its deeper purpose is to keep those fool egos of ours from running hog wild after money and fame at AA's expense."

AA members recalled for a moment Sunday, that here was the layman who sparked a revolution in public attitudes toward alcoholism and who worked tirelessly to develop the concept within medical circles that alcoholism is an illness which can be arrested but never cured.

But in every tongue on earth, perhaps a Loner on a far distant island, or one of hundreds in a great Cathedral, there will be a soft "Thank you" to God that "Bill" lived and did so much to make this world a better place "for this alcoholic to live."

"Bill" walked the mile, from an alcoholic Hell to freedom; he did his thing, sparked by a God he understood; he fashioned a new self, with an honest desire to stop drinking; he captured a 24-hour way of life to battle the bottle; he found a meaning of life and kept it by giving it away and he loved his own until the end.

Looking Backward

Horrible Disaster at Kenosha

100 YEARS AGO
Quoted from the Appleton Crescent for Feb. 4, 1871.

At an early hour on Tuesday morning last, the hotel at Kenosha was discovered to be on fire, which soon enveloped the whole structure and destroyed it.

The most horrible part of this disaster was the loss of lives. Six persons are supposed to have been burned to death, and several others so badly burned that they cannot recover.

The family of J. B. Merrill, consisting of a mother and four children, perished in the flames. Their heartrending screams could be distinctly heard by those escaping, but as the fire broke out near the stairway, escape was soon cut off in that direction and no one could get to them or go to their relief.

Simon Keller, the clerk of the House, was so badly burned trying to save others that he has since died.

Several people jumped from the third story and were saved from a dreadful death by burning.

25 YEARS AGO
Tuesday, Feb. 12, 1946.

Mrs. Matt Neilson was elected president of the Mary Todd Lincoln Club at the annual Lincoln Day luncheon at the home of Mrs. Gilbert Trentlage. Other officers were Mrs. Theodore Sanders, vice president; Mrs. John R. E. Miller, secretary; Mrs. John Woehler, chaplain; Mrs. Trentlage, patriotic instructor; Mrs. Matt Bauer, publicity, and Mrs. Jake Pfeil, historian.

Miss Shirley Buesing, Appleton: Miss Elizabeth Lindsay, Manawa, and Miss Marilyn Chaimson, Shawano, were among the Lawrence students admitted to membership in The Sunset Players, college drama group. Miss Barbara Harkins, Appleton, also was elected vice president to succeed Miss Shirley Foresman, Appleton, who was graduated.

10 YEARS AGO

Chosen to the three-act senior class play, "You Can't Take it with You," at Kimberly High School were students Janice and Judy Vanevenhoven, Nola Hartjes, Lamert Geitman, Steve Rastall, Michael Cattanach, Kenneth Smits, David Hamann, Lois Vandenberg, Edward Smith, David Manley, Charles Forester, Mary Ellen Mills, Gary Dresang, JoAnn Gossens, James Vanderheiden, Jack Bittorf, Gene Behrendt and Judy Kemps.

The President's Intent

U.S. Still Long Way From Being Safely Out of Vietnam

BY JOSEPH KRAFT

WASHINGTON — President Nixon's recent connection with Joe Alsop goes well beyond White House circulation of the favorable column on Laos. The President also called Mr. Alsop a couple of hours before the invasion was announced to clue him in on the joyous news in advance. And their association, it seems to me, says a good deal about Mr. Nixon's true intentions in Southeast Asia.

My impression is that Mr. Nixon approached his decision on Laos in precisely the same spirit as he approached the Cambodian operation last year. At that time he called his critics "bums" and announced that he himself was acting to prevent the United States from being a "pitiful, helpless giant." This time, instead of blurting out these sentences himself, he lets Mr. Alsop do it for him. It is the same ego trip — taken now by proxy.

Since there is a great deal of surmise in this impression, it is important to stress the almost unique character of Mr. Alsop's view. He is not one of those supporters of the Vietnam policy who chopped and changed when the going got tough. On the contrary, he is one of the few Americans who have been consistently serious about Vietnam.

He has at all times argued that preventing a Communist takeover in South Vietnam was critical to freedom and security throughout Southeast Asia and the world. He has understood that there was small chance for a rapid American withdrawal that would leave the Saigon regime in good position to defend itself successfully.

He has been willing to finger those inside the Administration, notably

Kraft

Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird, who tried to put over the hoax of a bug-out camouflaged as Vietnamization. And he has insisted that a good way to keep South Vietnam from going down the drain was to deal a crippling blow to the Communist insurgents.

From that point of view, those who disagree are not merely wrong. They are knaves. Similarly, a President who resists the pressure to bug-out is pretty special. He is a historical figure doing right against the tide of misguided opinion.

Mr. Nixon may not buy, as he might put it, this viewpoint completely. He has a lot of other considerations — to balance off against going all-out in Vietnam. From time to time, at least, he has to accommodate advisers who favor a temperate approach.

But the President has obvious yearnings for the clean consistency of the all-out approach. He too has wanted to deal the enemy a crushing blow before full American withdrawal — hence the likening of the Cambodian operation last year to the D-Day and Stalingrad victories in World War II.

It Was 'Lonely' Decision

When the President on top of all this underlines his connection with Mr. Alsop and his special views, something important is being said. It seems clear to me anyhow that Mr. Nixon is saying along with Mr. Alsop in the column distributed by the White House that he views the war critics as "down right eager to be proved right by an American defeat." It seems to me that Mr. Nixon sees himself, as Mr. Alsop saw him in the same column, as an historic figure who made a "lonely" decision with "cool courage."

If this surmise is correct, the difficulties ahead hardly need underlining. The President is deeply committed in the most personal way to dealing a staggering blow to the other side. But the other side is good at absorbing blows and coming back. Progressively more so as American forces dwindle. So Mr. Nixon is putting himself in the position where he will have to go back into the breach over and over again.

That means that the lid is off the list of possible actions compiled long ago by the Joint Chiefs of Staff as possible ways to win the war in Vietnam. More bombing of North Vietnam is on that list of course. So is mining Haiphong harbor. So is the invasion of the north talked up in South Vietnam last week by the vice president, Nguyen Cao Ky.

The ominous feature of the present moment, in other words, is Mr. Nixon's state of mind. He is defining courage as not being afraid to do frightful things. And that means the country is still a long way from being safely out of Vietnam and the nightmare it has brought us abroad and at home.

Freedom Fright

LONDON (AP) — Women's new-found freedom is scaring the pants off men, psychologist James Hemmings told 800 women at a club meeting.

Men have lost "the warrior, breadwinner and muscleman image," the 61-year-old doctor continued. But the main advantage is that marriage becomes more secure with equal partners, he concluded.

Labor Lobby Takes Advantage of Times, Pushes Pet Projects

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — In the heyday of Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal and its demonstration of the value of organized labor in a liberal coalition, a union leader earned a footnote in the history of his times by offering a definition of politics. It involves the determination of who gets what and why, he said with admirable communicative skill.

Wyngaard

Perhaps there are some of the men who are now lobbying the state administration and within the ruling circle of the Democrats at the Capitol who remember that explanation. They are working with singular speed to bring up for record votes objectives of the labor lobby that were denied during preceding years of Republican dominance.

Gov. Patrick Lucey has asked his legislative lieutenants to withhold explicit propositions on some of the issues that they exploited during their campaigns last fall — ranging from property tax relief to environmental protection laws to additional school aids and tax redistribution and many others discussed at length and in detail. That has provided a vacuum for the vigilant labor lobby, which is determined that the party which got such crucial and demonstrable help from its treasuries and manpower reserves will be recognized in the way of new legislation.

Strike-Breaker Bill

A first demonstratton was in the disciplined Democratic formation behind the so-called "strike-breaker" bill.

The listener tended to get the impression that the measure so quickly approved by a solid party line of the big Democratic Assembly majority was more symbolic than practical. There was no documentation of the existence of "professional strike breakers" in Wisconsin or the use thereof.

Sponsors of the bill contented themselves with scorn for anti-union hirelings, and the citation of such prohibition laws elsewhere. Nor did they trouble to engage the Republicans in debate. They presented the appearance of a tolerant willingness to permit the opposition to speak for a few hours, knowing that nothing was likely to break the solid phalanx of Democrats committed in advance to "labor."

That discipline will result in the calling up of other and more important objectives of the labor lobbyists, who have had little about which to boast to their troops in recent years.

For years, the labor command has sought to modify the rule that has stood since the last basic revision of state labor laws in the late 1930s, namely that a two-thirds vote of the workers in an employment unit is required for an all-union shop agreement with a simple majority vote. Given the acknowledged debt of many Democrats, and especially Lucey, for the most strenuous labor-sponsored political campaign last fall that Wisconsin has ever experienced, there is very little doubt that it will be pushed through the Democratic Assembly.

The third major objective will be the so-called "agency shop" law, which would permit unions to assess nonmembers, notably in public employment which is the big new "market" for union organizers.

Senators Read Returns

There should be some doubt about the final decision on these labor bills and others yet to be brought out because the State Senate contains a solid majority of Republicans. If the GOP representatives there fail to resist, they will be repudiating their Republican colleagues in the Assembly, not to mention a long line of Republican legislatures and Republican state administrations.

But the assumption that the Senate will in fact support its Assembly Republican colleagues, and its own record, may be a frail reed for the employer community and the like-minded.

Most of the Republican senators face re-election campaigns next year. The force of the union vote as shown last fall has not been lost upon them. The union lobby may be on the brink of its most significant triumph in state politics since the rule of the younger La Follettes.

Strictly Personal

Great Art Offers Release From Life

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

My column on Beethoven's birthday brought a lot of flack from readers — some of whom disagreed with my thesis that "culture" as such does nothing to improve a person's character, while others took umbrage at my estimate of Beethoven's own personal character.

Harris

Not to pursue the argument into tedium, let me simply state what I think is true about the relationship between art and character, based not only on study but also on the many writers and artists (including even a few geniuses) I have known over a long period.

In the field of the arts, a man's work represents what he would like to be; his personal life represents what he has to be. That is, the best part of every creative man goes into his work; the dross remains in his personal life. This is why so many persons are disappointed when they meet a great artist in person: he is smaller than his work.

I yield to no man in my adoration of Beethoven's genius. His last symphonies, sonatas and quartets are among the noblest productions of mankind. And he was not merely a musical genius in a technical sense — he also deeply understood the spiritual roots of mankind. (This explains why so fine a virtuoso as Horowitz refused to play the late Beethoven sonatas, saying modestly, "I am not a philosopher.")

But Beethoven as a man was quite another thing. While he had his moments of goodness and graciousness, he was for the most part in the grip of a neurosis that stunted and perverted the whole spectrum of his relationships with the world. In his life he did not possess the free will that he possessed in his music; he was a victim of his own psychic past, and only in his music was he able to escape from this slavery.

As for the influence of great music, painting and literature on their audience, there is absolutely no evidence, in history or psychology, that men who are moved by these creations are made in any way "better" in their personal lives or in their careers. Most often, they use art as a "release" from reality rather than as a deeper entrance into it.

And even those who perceive the profound spiritual implications of works of art may be too psychically crippled to transform this knowledge into positive acts of love; indeed, if the creator cannot do it himself, how can we expect the recipient to do so? We change only by the power of personal example, as Socrates and Jesus and St. Francis so fully understood. We do not change by preachments, ideas, or symbols.

Tolstoi tried more desperately than any other genius to live up to his works, and failed. In the end, he recognized that art can point the way, but is powerless to lead us there.

Australians Grateful for Pollution Hints

U.S. Demonstrated What Not to Do to Save Environment

By IAN McCAUSLAND
Associated Press Writer

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Sydney has one of the world's most beautiful harbors and some of its finest beaches. It is also the dirtiest city in Australia.

Pollution in Sydney has not yet reached U.S. proportions, but it is getting there.

"We should be grateful to the Americans. They showed us what not to do," says Dr. T. L. Mullins, director of pollution studies at the New South Wales Institute of Technology.

A Senate committee in an 18-month study on water pollution found that parts of the harbor have been turned into marine deserts and that swimming pools in the area have been forced to close. The committee recommended establishment of a national commission to combat pollution and manage Australia's water resources.

Antipollution Moves

Prime Minister John G. Gorton has proposed that a national advisory council be set up to coordinate antipollution moves by state governments.

An official survey of the current cost of fighting pollution said Australian manufacturers are spending between $6 million and $11 million a year trying to keep the menace under control.

The water and sewerage boards in Australia's main cities are spending about $77 million a year on antipollution measures, the survey showed.

Only 70 per cent of Sydney's homes are connected with sewers, as compared to 90 per cent in Melbourne and Adelaide. Sydney has been pinpointed as the nation's worst offender in sea-dumping of sewage.

Sydney newspapers, radio and television stations are giving pollution plenty of publicity, and one paper is running a write-in campaign to combat it. One of the most active groups is an organization called MUCK, "Mothers Unite, Clean Kurnell."

Cook Landing

Kurnell is the spot where Capt. James Cook landed 200 years ago and claimed Australia for Britain. It is also the area where oil tankers unload. When heat caused a pipe to burst on the waterfront there last month, the oil company involved ordered 200 of its men to work through Christmas cleaning up the mess. Other oil companies gave assistance.

Last year a conservation group in Melbourne won a battle to prevent a plan from constructing an oil pipeline across the city harbor. Despite assurances that the pipe would hold, the conservationists insisted that an anchor chain might drag and break the pipe. As a result, a more expensive overland route was chosen.

Conservationists' targets range from oil and sewage pollution to public toilets located near the nation's beauty spots.

The Parliament in New South Wales has joined the crusade, putting through legislation tightening controls on pollution and meting out stiff fines to offenders. In this state any one guilty of pollution faces fines of up to $11,200 and $2,200 for each additional day of the offense.

In Victoria, first offenders can be fined $560, but repeaters are hit with penalties of up to $5,600.

Lon Nol Under Intensive Care

HONOLULU (AP) — Cambodian Premier Lon Nol remains in the intensive care section of Tripler Army Hospital here after suffering a stroke, officials say.

Lon Nol was stricken a week ago and arrived in Honolulu on an Air Force plane Saturday.

A hospital spokesman said Lon Nol's left side was partly paralyzed as a result of the stroke but that his vital signs are normal and the premier is "alert, cooperative and cheerful."

Rex Harrison, Wife Agree to Get Divorce

LOS ANGELES (Calif.) (AP) — Actress Rachel Roberts has filed suit for divorce from actor Rex Harrison whom she married in Italy in 1967.

Her petition in the Santa Monica Superior Court cited the standard "irreconcilable differences" which is a ground for divorce in California.

The couple, who are both British, formally separated last month. Miss Roberts, 43, said she and her husband, 63, had reached an agreement on division of property.

The Law and You

Pedestrian's Right to Cross Isn't Absolute

BY THE WISCONSIN BAR

Wisconsin laws dealing with pedestrian right-of-way at controlled intersections or crosswalks as well as those at uncontrolled intersections, do not give a pedestrian the absolute right to step off the curb at any time. Even if the pedestrian has the right-of-way he cannot walk into apparent danger without being negligent.

In a recent court case, the evidence presented at the trial was in conflict as to how a pedestrian - car accident occurred at an intersection. According to the pedestrian, he started to cross the street almost immediately after the light changed and was hit by the car when he was about 10 feet into the street. But according to the driver, when the light changed the pedestrian turned around and looked at him and he nodded for the pedestrian to go ahead and cross. However, the pedestrian instead remained standing in the same place. Thus the driver began moving ahead slowly and was starting to turn the corner when he heard a "thud" and a yell and he stopped immediately.

The court said it appeared that the pedestrian stepped off the curb and walked into the side of the car after the driver had determined that the pedestrian did not intend to cross and proceeded to make his turn.

The pedestrian had been found 80 per cent negligent and the driver 20 per cent. The pedestrian appealed the jury's verdict to the Supreme Court.

The question as to whether a pedestrian has the right-of-way, is "crossing" or "has started to cross" the street, the court noted, is a factual determination to be made by the trier of the fact (judge or jury), as is the question of the casual effect of the plaintiff-pedestrian's contributory negligence.

The question of intoxication on the part of the pedestrian also was raised in that particular case. The court noted that intoxication itself does not give rise to liability but only does so when combined with some act of casual negligence. Hence, it said, evidence of intoxication is a proper consideration in determining negligence only if it is found that the amount of alcohol consumed so affected the person so as to appreciably lessen or impair his ability to exercise ordinary care for his own safety.

'D And C' May Come For Numerous Reasons

BY G. C. THOSTESON, M. D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have heard so many people say, "So-and-so had a D. N. C." I don't know what the initials stand for, so don't understand what it is about. I hate to ask anybody because everyone else seems to know what it is, and I hate to look ignorant. — F. R.

Well, never ask, and never find out! And don't be too sure that "so many people" know what the initials stand for, either.

It isn't "D. N. C.," you see. It's "D. 'n' C." or "D. and C." meaning "dilation and curettage," and I'll explain that for you.

It's a procedure used quite frequently by gynecologists for a variety of purposes, sometimes for diagnosis of various "female troubles" and sometimes as a corrective measure.

Sometimes, either because of unexplained vaginal bleeding or pain, it is necessary to find out what condition exist in the uterus. That's one use of the D. and C. Some of the inner surface tissues are scraped off so the cells can be studied.

The "D" stands for "dilation." Instruments are used to dilate the neck, or entrance, to the uterus. (The uterus, as shown in preganancy, has a tremendous capacity for expansion, but it has to be expanded gradually.)

Then, when it has been dilated sufficiently, other instruments are used to scrape off ("C" for curettage) some of the tissues. Examination of these often gives an immediate answer as to what the trouble is and how to correct it.

Another use of the same procedure is required following a miscarriage, if some fragments of the afterbirth remain attached to the uterus and need to be removed.

Dr. Thosteson

Or, for yet another example, the D. and C. is one of the methods used in abortions, which now are legal in some states. The fertilized egg attaches itself to the inner surface of the uterus in its early stages and can be removed by the curettage (scraping) process.

So, you see, the D. and C. is used for a pretty wide variety of purposes.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I find your booklets very informative, especially "Lost Secrets of Reducing." I have lost 78 pounds in the last year by following your advice. I didn't need pills or any other "crutches."

Now I wish you had a booklet on hyperkinetic children. I have to go to my son's teachers every year to explain his condition and to help them understand it. I have some clippings to take along, but a booklet would sure be a help. — Mrs. M. A. D.

Bravo for your results in reducing. Anyone who wants to try my method (or should I say methods?) can get all the information by sending for the booklet. Send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to me in care of the Post-Crescent.

As to hyperkinetic children — I know there are a good many who have to overcome this problem. How many, I'm not sure. I'll have another column on this subject in the next few days, but I don't know whether enough people would want such a booklet to warrant the time it would take to write it. I'll consider it, though.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Do you have any booklets on planned parenthood? If not, where can I get such information? — J. H.

Why not write to "Planned Parenthood — World Population," at 810 Seventh Ave., New York, N. Y. 10019?

Don't take chances with "kidney trouble." It may be only minor, but it can be dangerous. Read Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "Your Kidneys — Facts You Need To Know About Them." Write to Dr. Thosteson in care of the Post-Crescent, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Federal Tax Sharing Plan Called 'Cop-Out' by Union

By NEIL GILBRIDE
AP Labor Writer

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — An AFL-CIO official said today President Nixon's proposal to share federal income with the states was a political "cop-out" which would threaten to starve some of the nation's educational programs for funds.

"It's a real cop-out," Walter Davis, AFL-CIO education director, said of Nixon's legislative plan to funnel some $5 billion a year back to states and cities.

Davis said it could lead to loss of funds to some educational programs that now get their money through specifically earmarked federal aid.

"Politically, Nixon's revenue sharing plan would give a pot of money for local politicians to struggle over as to whether it goes to a school lunch program, vocational education or something else," Davis said in an interview.

"What Nixon is saying to them is, 'I don't want to be involved in political struggles locally; you guys take the money and fight out among yourselves,' " he added.

Educational Matters

The AFL-CIO Executive Council took up educational matters today after Monday's opening criticism of Nixon's revenue sharing proposal and his plan to consolidate the Labor Department with other agencies.

"Many health, education, welfare, housing manpower and antipoverty programs already approved by Congress have never received full funding," said the AFL-CIO's chief congressional lobbyist, Andrew J. Biemiller.

George Meany, 76-year-old president of the 13.6-million-member labor federation, called Nixon's revenue sharing proposal a "gimmick."

Davis said the plan also could revive the church-state controversy over government aid to religious schools which can now get certain federal aid.

"Some states would refuse to give it if they got their federal money in a block grant with no strings on how to use it," Davis said.

Georgia May Observe King, Russell Days

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A Georgia Senate committee has approved a resolution to establish state holidays on the birthdays of Martin Luther King Jr. and U S. Sen. Richard B. Russell.

The Senate Judiciary Committee gave unanimous consent Monday after rejecting a resolution mentioning only King's birthday.

Both resolutions were offered by Sen. Leroy Johnson of Atlanta, a Negro.

The resolution now requires approval of the full Senate and the House to establish the holidays

Two Killed in Car-Train Crashes

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Two victims died Monday in separate car-train accidents, raising to six the number of persons reported fatally injured in Wisconsin traffic accidents involving trains in less than a week.

The crashes raised the state's highway fatality toll for the year to 69 compared with 82 on this date last year.

William J. Feely, 48, of St. Francis died Monday when thrown from his car as it was struck at a crossing in a Milwaukee suburb by a Chicago & North Western passenger train.

Feely was killed at the same crossing in Oak Creek at which a Racine teen-ager died in a car-train crash a month ago.

A Chippewa Falls woman, Mrs. Roman Pinter, 54, died in a hospital Monday after a car driven by her husband struck the final car of a freight train at a crossing in Eau Claire.

Officials said warning signals were operating at both the Oak Creek and Eau Claire crossings.

Environmentalists Fight Project

Alaska Pipeline Hearings to Open

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is opening hearings on plans for an 800-mile pipeline to tap the rich oilfields on Alaska's North Slope, a project fought by natives and environmentalists.

The Interior Department scheduled hearings today and Wednesday on an application by Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. to construct the 48-inch-diameter tube from the North Slope to the warm-water port of Valdez on the Gulf of Alaska.

A related hearing will be held Wednesday by the Senate Interior Committee on claims by 55,000 Eskimos, Aleuts and Indians to ancestral rights to much of Alaska's land

Alyeska officials say the native land claims must be settled before construction can start.

The pipeline is blocked by two temporary federal court injunctions, one obtained by conservationists and the other by an Alaska native village in the pipeline's path.

Melt Snow

The conservation group claims the pipeline, across federal land, would violate the government's environmental protection law. They claim friction of the rushing oil could melt the frozen ground, buckle the pipeline and flood the land with oil.

In addition, the group contends, the proposed pipeline would disrupt migration of Alaskan animals and destroy the native life style, they say.

The injunction granted the native village is tied in with claims before the Interior Committee.

Official subject of the committee hearing is a bill by Chairman Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., and other senators including Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, and Mike Gravel, D-Alaska. The measure passed the Senate but not the House last session.

It calls for federal payment of $500 million to Alaska natives for land they claim. In addition, the bill would provide up to $500 million in royalties for minerals and oil found on the land and give the natives clear title to 10 million acres of land.

Testimony also is expected on bills proposed by Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Fred R. Harris, D-Okla., and by Reps. Wayne N. Aspinall, D-Colo., and James Haley, D-Fla.

Kennedy and Harris plan to introduce a bill they say is backed by the Alaska Federation of Natives. It would give the natives 60 million acres of land plus the cash and royalties of the Jackson bill.

The bill sponsored by Haley and Aspinall would give the natives title to three times the acres occupied by their villages and permission to hunt, fish and trap on an additional 40 million acres. It also would provide $500 million in federal payments plus $500 million from mineral and oil royalties—half of which would come from the state's share of production revenues.

Present law gives the state 90 per cent of mineral royalties from public lands in Alaska.

Alaska Gov. William Egan, Secretary of Interior Rogers Morton and Alaska Federation of Natives spokesmen will testify on the contrasting proposals at the Senate committee hearings.

Author to be Charged

HUMBOLDT, Tenn. (AP) — Author Jesse Hill Ford faces arraignment Wednesday on a first-degree murder charge in the shooting death of a young soldier.

Ford was indicted by a grand jury Monday on charges he killed Pvt. George H. Doaks Jr., 21, of nearby Trenton last Nov. 16.

The 42-year-old author remained free on $20,000 bond. He also faces a $250,000 lawsuit filed by Doaks' widow.

Doaks, a Negro, was shot while sitting in an automobile in the driveway of Ford's home. With Doaks at the time was Allie V. Andrews, a distant relative.

Ford told police he was afraid the persons in the car intended to harm his son when the latter returned home from a friend's house.

Ford said his book, "The Liberation of Lord Byron Jones," had resulted in some hard feelings among Negroes and whites in the community.

He said both he and his son had been harassed after publication of the book. It deals with the murder of a Negro undertaker who was trying to divorce his wife, who was having an affair with a white police officer

On the night Doaks as slain, Ford said, he grabbed his rifle after spotting the car in the driveway, ran toward the vehicle and fired a warning shot into the air.

Then, Ford said, he ran up to the automobile, smacked it with the rifle butt and yelled: "Come out. The police are on the way, you are under arrest."

The automobile started away, Ford said.

"I fired the second shot in hopes of stopping the car. I did not aim. And the instant I fired, the car stopped," he said.

Miss Andrews testified at a hearing that she and Doaks entered the driveway after becoming confused about the way home from a dairy bar.

She said she heard only one shot—the shot that passed through the rear window of the car, striking Doaks in the head.

2 Get Sentences In Ferry Sinking

SEOUL (AP) — The Cheju Island District Court sentenced two police officers to eight months in prison today in connection with the ferry sinking in the Korean Straits in December in which 325 persons were lost.

The court found the officers guilty of neglecting their duty because they allowed the ferry to sail from the island although they knew it was dangerously overloaded.

The court found two other police officers guilty of neglecting their duty and sentenced them to eight months in prison also but suspended the sentences.

Only 12 persons were rescued after the 362-ton ferry capsized and sank. The owner of the ferry, the skipper and four others are awaiting trial on homicide charges.

Calley Trial Resuming After Recess

FT. BENNING, Ga. (AP) — The My Lai trial of Lt. William L Calley Jr resumes today where it left off four weeks ago —with arguments over whether psychiatric testimony should be heard by the six-officer jury.

The government filed a motion that none of the defense's psychiatric testimony be admitted on grounds that it can add nothing to the case.

Judge Reid Kennedy scheduled a hearing on the motion, in the absence of the jury, as the first order of business.

The 27-year-old Calley, a platoon leader in the March 16, 1968 raid on the Vietnamese village of My Lai, is charged with murder of 102 Vietnamese men, women and children.

He is expected to take the stand in his own defense sometime this week.

Calley's trial was recessed Jan. 18 after a psychiatrist testified Calley was "like an automaton, a robot" who could no disobey an order to kill everyone in the village. The order, witnesses testified since the trial started Nov. 12, came from Capt. Ernest Medina, the company commander.

Classroom on the Road

Dad Makes Learning Fun

WETLAND, Mich. (AP) — Dissatisfied with the traditional classroom education, educator Burt Bradley is packing up his three young daughters for what he hopes will be an eye-opening and informative tour of North America by van.

"Learning has to be fun. If it's not fun, the teacher isn't doing it right. So you look around for a new way of doing it," says Bradley.

He planned to set out today with daughters Sandra, 7, Sheryl, 9, and Susanne, 11, from their suburban Detroit home on an odyssey which will continue until next fall.

The curriculum is history, math, ecology, English and whatever other interests are sparked by the trip, says Bradley, 34 He holds a Ph.D in higher education, a teaching certificate and has experience in public school teaching and vocational training. He is divorced and has custody of the children.

The trip will take the quartet down the Eastern Seaboard to Key West, Fla., west along the Gulf Coast, then down through Texas into Mexico and the Yucatan Peninsula. Later, they will head north to Alaska through California, Oregon, Washington and Canada. They plan to return home by way of the old Oregon Trail to St. Louis, Bradley says.

The girls will learn math by solving navigation problems —at a given speed how long it will take to get from Charleston to St. Augustine?—and American history by standing where it happened, he says

The 500 cubic feet of space in the remodeled van is crammed with a restroom, sink, ice box, stove, closet, two double beds and one single bed It carries a host of reference books and a four-speaker stereo tape system through which Bradley says he'll pipe Spanish lessons

As homework, Bradley expects the girls to keep journals and make daily entries about the things they see and do.

Bradley believes he can make the trip for about $3,000 but he says: "If the money gets short I'll just stop and work a little somewhere."

Michigan law requires children to be enrolled in school until they're 16 but Bradley said an official at the state Department of Education told him it would be a simple matter to promote the girls to their next grades by examination

As a bit of personal research, Bradley said he had the girls' education level tested recently and he'll have it tested again when they get home.

"I predict you can make really big jumps in achievement just because of this integrated approach to what you're trying to learn, making it a real life kind of thing," he says.

Police Shot at in Reggio Calabria

Loss of Capital Angers Italian Town

REGGIO CALABRIA, Italy (AP) — Angry townspeople fired on police today as rebellious Reggio Calabria seethed over the Calabrian assembly's vote naming the rival city of Catanzaro the regional capital.

The compromise approved by the assembly early today named Reggio the seat of the legislature, but the people of Reggio wanted the pride and profit of having the entire new regional government in their city.

Police Chief Emilio Santillo said an unidentified youth was wounded when several shots were fired at police removing a barricade in the Sbarre district. He said his men did not return the fire.

As a three-week old general strike continued and 6,000 tense policemen and carabinieri were kept on full alert in the city, the townspeople packed the cafes, cursed the central government in Rome and debated hotly whether to continue the protest activity

But "we knew all along this would happen," said many.

Meeting in Catanzaro, 75 miles northeast of Reggio, the Calabrian assembly argued late Monday night over the compromise proposed by Premier Emilio Colombo and approved it 21 to 12. Although four members from Reggio voted for the measure, seven others refused to vote, and Colombo's Christian Democratic party expelled three of them from the party.

The compromise also includes location of a steel mill employing 12,000 persons near Reggio, but diehards rejected all the government's concessions and vowed to keep up the fight

Rome selected Catanzaro over its poorer but larger neighbor last June when Calabria and 19 other regions were set up to decentralize the Italian government Rioting began in Reggio soon afterward and has resulted in five deaths and injury to hundreds. General strikes and other disruptions have occurred
